Rumanian Phone Call Gives First Clew to Mystery.

Mrs. Insull Faints Under Questioning

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Athens, March 16 (Friday) (AP).—Greek police charged early today that the sensational escape of Samuel Insull from Athens was engineered by an international criminal gang operating from Rumania.

An Athens lawyer and certain others were placed under arrest after the tracing of a long-distance phone call to Rumania, which police claimed they had overheard.

Insull was unverifiably reported to have escaped dressed as a woman from under the noses of Athens authorities, and to be either hiding in Greece or aboard a northbound express train.

Mrs. Insull, his almost constant companion during the latter months of his stay in Greece, last night was declared an undesirable alien and ordered deported from the country after authorities had sought knowledge from her concerning Insull's plans.

The others arrested besides the Athens lawyer were said to be persons implicated in the telephone conversation. These included a broker, a cook, a valet, a man servant and two others. They were not proved to have been in Insull's service.

All prisoners held by police were thoroughly questioned. Officers said Mrs. Insull fainted twice under the examination to which she was subjected.

Wife Is Detained.

Mrs. Insull was detained by the police after she had revealed that her 71-year-old husband, former Chicago utilities operator, had fled from the apartment where he had lived for the last 17 months, in defiance of attempts to extradite him to the United States.

Police, who were furiously investigating all angles of Insull's sudden disappearance, alleged that the persons responsible for his escape were operating under the leadership of a former Rumanian courtier, whose name wats not divulged.

The law permits detention of arrested persons for 24 hours.

In answer to questions, the chief of Athens police said:

"I believe Insull is still in Greece, but far from Athens."

The latest rumor, which was persistent, was that Insull is in the Grecian City of Salonika.

Flight Deep Mystery.

Where the former Chicago utilities czar went, or how was a mystery; even his sudden departure was but a rumor until the alien control department finally admitted tonight Insull had gone, supposedly without proper traveling papers.

Some said he eluded a police cordon dressed as a woman; others believed he escaped before dawn in a small boat to an island in the Aegean Sea, but the consensus was he was en route to Paris.

John Metaxas, minister of the interior, announced officially late tonight that Insull had departed before dawn this morning.

Greek authorities admitted the trail of the fugitive was cold.

Belief grew in some quarters that he was still in Greece—possibly even in Athens—since he is liable to arrest anywhere because he lacks travel documents or visas.

Seek Two Britons.

Athens police attempted to trace two mysterious Englishmen who visited Insull last night. After the vistors' departure it was reported Insull and his wife appeared pleased.

Mrs. Insull, refusing to say a word which might betray her husband's activities, remained in custody tonight.

The American Minister, Lincoln MacVeagh, called on the foreign minister tonight and lodged an official protest in connection with the disappearance of Insull.

A man who claimed to have witnessed the precipitate leave-taking said a woman accompanied Insull, who also was garbed as a woman, in an automobile to board an express for Paris.

Mrs. Insull said she did not know the destination of her husband, whom the United States had twice sought unsuccessfully to extradite.

Two Are Killed, Six Injured In Auto Crash

Five Autos Pile Up on Bladensburg Road; Nurse, One Driver Dead.

Two persons were killed and six were injured in a five-car crash last night in the 2900 block of Bladensburg road.

Miss Babe Pardee, 35, of Congress Heights, a nurse at St. Elizabeths Hospital, died a few moments after her leg was torn off when she was caught between the colliding automobiles. Stepping off a bus to visit a friend Robert Otto Wolf, of the 2600 block of Bladensburg road, Miss Pardee was crushed when a car attempted to pass another traveling north along the pike and in doing so struck a third automobile being driven in the opposite direction.

The driver of the roadster, which was struck in the first crash, was Robert R. Brown, of the 100 block of Third street northeast, police say. Samuel Egan, one of the victims, was taken to Casualty Hospital. According to a police report, Egan died shortly after being admitted to the hospital.

The truck is owned by Warren Himmelright, of Hernston, Va. The driver has not been identified.

Several other passengers of the colliding cars, were injured.

Twenty minutes later, a fourth car traveling from Washington to Baltimore, struck the wreckage and its occupants were injured.

Still more injuries occurred when another automobile, described by police as traveling at a high rate of speed from Washington to Baltimore, sideswiped a lighter machine coming in the opposite direction, turning over the car before caroming off into the crowd of people gathered around the accident.

While screams of the injured threw the neighborhood into a frenzy, ambulance attendants, police and firemen worked frantically.

Lindy Spurns Second Plea To Aid Probe

Flier Again Wires Dern Army Is Invading Private Field.

By Felix Bruner.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh for a second time refused to serve on Secretary Dern's committee to investigate Army aviation.

"I do not feel that I can take part directly or indirectly in the operation by the military forces of American business and commerce," Lindbergh said yesterday.

His telegram was in reply to a message from Secretary Dern asking him to reconsider his first refusal to serve on the committee with Clarence Chamberlin and other noted aviation authorities.

In his first refusal Lindbergh expressed the opinion that the use of the Army to carry the mail was "unwarranted and contrary to American principles."

Dern replied that the flier had a misconception of the purposes of the committee and that it was expected to go into the entire subject of Army aviation.

Cites Invasion of Business.

Lindbergh's second message said:

"I want to thank you for your telegram and to assure you that I deeply appreciate the honor of being asked to serve on the committee.

"I do not feel that I can take part directly or indirectly in the operation by the military forces of American business and commerce.

"The Army is now being used to operate the commercial air-mail system. Consequently I regret extremely to reply again that I do not feel I can serve on a committee which is charged to study and report upon the performance by the Army Air Corps in its mission to carry the air mail and directed by Executive order."

Following receipt of the message Dern said he was sorry that Lindbergh did not see fit to serve, and that he had hoped to have the benefit of the flier's services.

The message to Dern was the third one in which Lindbergh has expressed himself on the subject of using the Army to carry the mails. The first expression of opinion was contained in a message sent directly to President Roosevelt. Lindbergh is expected to amplify his statements when he appears today before the Senate Postoffice Committee.

In sharp contrast to Lindbergh's refusal to serve, Chamberlin yesterday called at the White House and received the President's thanks "for coming down and assisting in whatever way I can."

Nine Army Routes Ready.

Meanwhile the Postoffice Department announced nine routes over which the Army is expected to carry mail when the service is resumed, but indicated that the time of resumption would depend on the Army itself. It was indicated that

Crew Lost as Ship Capsizes in Storm

Finnish Motor Vessel Sinks Near Scotland.

Wick, Scotland, March 15 (AP).—The motor vessel Meta capsized at the entrance of the harbor here tonight and all members of the crew were believed lost.

Lifeboat crews were unable to reach the vessel due to a storm but heard the cries of the doomed men.

Sing a song of sixpence,
Pocketful of rye;
Fifty-odd starlings
Baked in a pie!

With apologies to the author of the old nursey rhyme and the King before whom the four-and-twenty blackbirds were served, South Trimble, clerk of the House, yesterday served a pie fit for the House leaders.

After conducting a secret and one-man hunting expedition the night before on the Capitol grounds, Trimble issued an invitation to attend a luncheon in the House restaurant at which the principal dish would be reedbird pie, a great delicacy.

Speaker Henry T. Rainey, Majority Leader Joseph Byrns and others arrived on time and hungry for the luncheon. After the first helping of the pie, they asked for more.

"My," remarked Byrns, "that's the best reedbird pie I ever tasted."

The others agreed that it was delicious. When the luncheon was over, there was not enough pie left to feed the House restaurant cat.

Trimble did not disillusion his guests, but let them return to the House floor and brag to their colleagues about the delicious pie they had tasted.

"I had heard so much about starlings being made into pie that I just thought I'd try it," Trimble explained afterward.

The restaurant cook, he said, prepared the dish just as he would any bird pie, with plenty of seasoning, onions and potatoes.

While Trimble made no claim to solving the eternal starling problem for the Capital, he admitted that his procedure would help. If every eight persons consented to eat 50 starlings, he said, that would be a lot of starling pie. And a lot of starlings would of necessity disappear.

It might be added, though not by Trimble, that some cocktails were reported to have preceded the starling pie. And that may explain, in part, the appetites of the guests.

Besides Speaker Rainey and Byrns, the guests were Representative Buchanan, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee; Representative Sumners, of Texas; Representative O'Connor, of New York; Representative Prall, of New York, and Representative Arnold, of Illinois.

Restored Pay Action Held Up By Legal Quirk

House Special Order Due; Senate Seeks to Send Bill to Conference.

Another delay in passage of the independent offices bill, carrying pay restoration for Government employes, appeared probable last night, as the measure was involved in a parliamentary tangle.

The bill will be a special order of business in the House again today, the third time it has come up this week. Just before the House adjourned yesterday, Representative Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, chairman of the subcommittee in charg of the bill, announced he would make a motion that the House insist on its amendments.

The Senate has asked for a conference on the difference between the House and Senate amendments. The question of whether the bill should go to conference or the House should stick to its guns will reopen the whole fight on the measure.

The Senate amendments provide for restoration of the entire 15 per cent pay cut. The House amendments provide for immediate restoration of 5 per cent and an additional 5 per cent July 1. There also is a difference of $90,000,000 in veterans' pension increases provided by the House and those provided by the Senate.

If the measure goes to conference, it ip srobable that it can not be agreed upon before next week.

Meanwhile, Chairman Connery of the House Labor Committee said he would insist that the House accept the Senate amendments.

Should Connery's motion be adopted, the bill would then go to

Woman Convicted As Jail-Break Aid

Sentence Is Deferred on West Virginian.

Huntington, W. Va., March 15 (Spl.).—In Federal District Court here today, Mrs. Richard Kelly, of Princeton, was convicted of aiding in the escape of two Federal prisoners recently from the Mercer County Jail. Sentence was deferred.

Mrs. Kelly smuggled saws into the jail and furnished an automobile in which William Mullens and William R. Albert escaped, according to Government charges.

Sheriff J. C. Fanning of Mercer County was recently sentenced to four months in the Lee Hall (Va.) Reformatory on a charge of negligence in the break. C. W. Thornton, former Mercer jailer, also was convicted, but disposition of his case was deferred.

Longshoremen for Strike.

Tacoma, Wash., March 15 (AP). Tacoma offices of the secertary of the International Longshoremens' Association today reported 86 per cent of the vote cast by longshoremen of eight ports were for a general strike of the 12,000 Pacific Coast longshoremen.

'Chip' Robert Loses PWA Board Post

President Replaces Young Executive With Admiral.

No Explanation Is Made of Unexpected Transfers.

L. W. "Chip" Robert, jr., recently relieved of most of his duties as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in charge of building, yesterday was dropped from the executive board of the Public Works Administration by order of President Roosevelt.

Robert was replaced on the board by Admiral Christian Joy Peoples, who took over most of his work in the Treasury. Admiral Peoples was named director of procurement of the Treasury. He handles all the building work that formarly passed through Robert's hands.

There was little explanation offered for the Public Works move. Secretary Ickes, PWA administrator said:

"When the President issues an order, it is usually obeyed."

However, it was felt that the action was simply a "follow-through" on the previous curtailment of Robert's duties. As chief of the division in charge of public buildings, his membership on the PWA board was considered essential. Relieved of his building responsibility, his primary importance to the board was lacking, and with Admiral Peoples directing building, the membership was simply switched.

When control of public building was taken away from Robert, the move was considered as part of Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau's broad "cleaning out" of his department to install key men of his own choosing. Robert was one of the most popular among younger Government officials.

Reports were circulated at the time of the change in the Treasury that Robert would resign, but these failed to materialize.

Secretary Ickes said he had no intimation of the removal of Robert from his board. The first he knew about it, he said, was when Admiral Peoples appeared for a meeting and announced the President's decision.

Quakes Strike More of Utah

Children Escape as Wall of School Collapses During Shocks.

Salt Lake City, March 15 (AP).—Four earth tremors were felt here today and some 30 new shocks were reported about the north end of Great Salt Lake, where muddy water flowed afresh from wide cracks opened in the earth's crust by Monday's quakes.

From Snowville, Utah, a town of 250, near the Idaho border, came reports of a narrow escape by school children there.

A wall of a one-story schoolhouse collapsed and the building was otherwise damaged Monday. The pupils had been dismissed just a short time before.

S'No Wonder They Forgot About Snow

Removal Hearing Dropped as Cold Vanishes.

Where are the snows of yesterday?

Balmy weather yesterday led members of the House District Committee to believe that spring is here and that winter has gone.

Although a hearing had been scheduled before the streets sub-committee on the Jenckes snow removal bill, Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, cancelled the hearing on the ground that the bill is no longer timely.

The bill would have provided a penalty of $5 a day on property owners who refused to remove snow from the sidewalks in front of their property.

Auto Labor Crisis Put Up to Johnson; Green Indorses Wagner Bill

Senators Told Chaos Will Follow Strikes

Permanent Control Held Only Way to Preserve Industrial Peace.

Gaunt specters of strikes now in the fomentive stage were dangled before a Senate committee yesterday by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in approving the Wagner bill for a permanent National Labor Board.

Urging immediate action to prevent chaos, he charged the automobile industry "is on the verge of one of the greatest strikes in history."

Green was among half a dozen sociologists and workers' representatives who converted the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee hearing into a field day for defense of labor. They envisaged the Wagner measure as a "potential cornerstone of international justice."

Reporters learned Ernest T. Weir, president of the strike-ridden Weirton Steel Co., Clarksburg, W. Va., and arch enemy of the National Labor Board, would appear before the committee later to explain his split with the NRA and criticize the Wagner proposal. He probably will reply to Green, who yesterday barked:

"If I had my way, I would pillory Mr. Weir as a public enemy."

U. S. Assumes Grand Coulee Dam Project

Action Relieving State of Washington Strengthens U. S. Power Status.

Uncle Sam took another stride into the power business yesterday when Secretary of the Interior Ickes announced the huge Grand Coulee dam and power project on the Columbia River would be constructed and operated by the Federal Government.

Decision to operate the "Muscle Shoals of the Northwest" as a Federal establishment places Government power production in a third important geographical division of the Nation. The Government will take over the project from the State of Washington, which originally planned the development as a Public Works Administration project.

The development, located in the eastern part of Washington, 75 miles west of Spokane, will be linked with another Federal project on the Columbia at Bonnerville, Oregon. The two Columbia River power dams, combined with the power output of the Casper-Alcova projects in Wyoming, another Federal undertaking, will annually generate millions of horsepower of energy, and will be an extensive source of power for private consumers in the Northwest.

The Northwest will be the third sector in which Federal plants will produce power. The other two are the Tennessee Valley of the Southeast, where output of Muscle Shoals and other dams will be used, and

That question, usually applied to chickens, is finding an answer in the Cold Lake district.

Flood waters of Stoney Creek washed gaping holes in Cold Lake highway. Jackfish, stranded in the pools, have been jumping across the road trying to get back into the creek.

NRA Bids Ban Hits Ford, Big Pay Advocate

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Loopholes in the Government's boycott of those who do not fly the Blue Eagle—notably Henry Ford—were plugged by another Executive order of President Roosevelt yesterday.

Hereafter, bidders for Federal contracts must not only actually comply with provisions of their NRA codes, but must also sign certificates of compliance, something the Ford Motor Co. has consistently failed to do.

Since the Detroit manufacturer now is engaged in raising wages and otherwise furthering the purposes of the recovery campaign—to say nothing of public utterances favorable to the Administration—the order was not without ironic implication.

For it stiffens requirements to such a point as is believed will enforce an airtight boycott on that class which has stood aloof from the Recovery Administration, obeying its edicts but taking no part in its regimentation.

Thus, it is expected to bring to the forefront again the celebrated Ford case, which has languished since last fall when Comptroller General J. R. McCarl held that the original boycott order of August 10 did not restrict Mr. Ford.

In that case, involving the purchase of trucks for the Civilian Conservation Corps, Comptroller McCarl ruled the order could apply to manufacturers as well as dealers who actually submitted the bids, but that no "affirmative assent"—such as a certificate of compliance—was required.

Hence, allotments of Ford trucks have been duly purchased, in cases

Board Hearing Fails to Bring Accord With Employers.

NRA Head Meets Manufacturers

They Refuse to Recede From Stand Against Unions' Claims.

The threat of bitter labor warfare in the automobile industry drew National Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson into the role of peacemaker yesterday, after the National Labor Board apparently had passed the problem along to him by recessing the meeting called to consider it.

The Labor Board had conducted hearings yesterday and the day before on the question of union rivalry, which threatens to throw the industry into a paralyzing strike.

During the hearings, employers flatly refused to recognize an American Federation of Labor Union as such. They disregarded pleas of William Collins, A. F. of L. organizer, to sit in on a conference in an endeavor to iron out the trouble, and left the hearing room after presenting prepared statements.

Refuses to Enter Pact.

Faced with this situation, the Labor Board, after only an hour and a half of executive session, adjourned.

Meantime, Johnson was closeted with W. S. Knudsen, executive vice president of the General Motors Corporation, who had declared that the Buick company, for which he spoke, would not enter into any contract with a federation local. Walter C. Teagle, head of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey and a member of the board, also was present. Johnson already had talked with Collins, whose testimony during the NRA field day had deeply impressed the administrator.

A few minutes before yesterday's hearings closed, Collins declared:

"The board is our last resort. The companies gave no information, except a statement showing as to how they have violated Section 7 (a) of the law and decisions of the Detroit Regional Labor Board. They always say they respect the Government and then they refuse everything. I don't see why the board can't get these manufacturers here for a conference—if the board has that power—to start collective bargaining."

Board's Functions.

Vice Chairman Clayton Williams explained to him the board had two functions, to make a record at which both sides could present their case and to consider the record in executive session. "Whether or not the manufacturers sit here is not for this board to decide in this record-making stage," he explained.

"Our discharged members are walking the streets," pleaded Collins. "I don't want any technicalities of this board to give these men the idea they can't get collective bargaining from this board. We simply can not go back to our men and say we had a round table conference

4 Hurt as Byrd Plane Crashes

Antarctic Test Hop Ends in Cuts and Jolting for Explorers.

Little America, March 14 (Delayed) (AP) (By Mackay Radio).—Four members of the Byrd Antarctic expedition escaped serious injury today when one of the expedition airplanes, piloted by Lieut. Comdr. Isaac Schlossbach, crashed on a test flight and was wrecked. They suffered slight cuts and were severely shaken up.

Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd immediately sent a second plane out on a test flight which was pronounced satisfactory and the plane took off for the Southern base with supplies.

Schlossbach took off with three other expedition members, Arthur A. Zuhn, Mount Pleasant, Iowa; Fred J. Dustin, Revere, Mass., and Harry Young, New Zealand, as passengers. As Schlossbach flew past the camp the ship began to sag and wobble and Admiral Byrd shouted orders for fire-fighting equipment and a crew rushed for the chemical tanks.

Slowly the plane came down, and then it struck the ground, piling the four occupants in a mass inside the cabin. Schlossbach cut the switch just before the crash.

San Francisco, March 15 (AP).—The Norwegian motorship Tai Yin today was pulled from the sandy beach at Point Reyes, 30 miles north of here where she grounded yesterday during a fog, and the vessel proceeded to this port.

Blood of Measles Victims Needed to Save 10 Children

Only "convalescent serum," blood from persons convalescing from measles, is of any value. This means that the blood probably must be that of other children, because adults rarely have measles.

In answer to a call by Dr. Kenneth O'Toole, head of the laboratory at the hospital, more than 200 persons offered their blood, but it was found that none of them fulfilled the requirements.

Dr. O'Toole is hoping that boys and girls over 10 years of age will volunteer. He also hopes to find some adults who may recently have had the disease.

New-Found Vaccine Guards Mice From Sleeping Sickness

By Howard W. Blakeslee.
(Associated Press Science Editor.)

New York, March 15.—A vaccine which gives from one thousand to one million fold protection to mice against St. Louis sleeping sickness of last summer was announced tonight by the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research.

The Rockefeller discoveries go far toward clarifying some of the most baffling things which have hindered physicians in coping with lethargic encephalitis outbreaks. They arise from the discovery, announced last November, of the virus which caused the St. Louis outbreak.

The new steps are described tonight in Science, the technical journal used by scientists to give their fellow workers first information. The Rockefeller work was done by Leslie T. Webster and George L. Fite.

The vaccine is the virus which came originally from brains of St. Louis sleeping sickness victims. Whether it acts as a protective vaccine depends on the part of the body into which it is inoculated.

Placed in the noses or the brains of mice, it was fatal. A hundred thousandth of a gram in the nose caused death, and a millionth of a gram in the brain was lethal.

But when this same virus was used as a vaccine injected under the skin it gave remarkable protection. Skin injections ranging as small as one hundredth to one millionth of a gram of virus, protected the mice against a million doses of the virus in the brain, and against a thousand of them in the nose.

Further Silver Action Barred By Morgenthau

Says Stock Inquiry Shows Backers of Metal Are Not Disinterested.

Secretary Morgenthau's expressed opposition to any action concerning silver purchases was viewed yesterday as ending the possibility of silver legislation at this session of Congress.

The Secretary expressed himself to eight members of the House Coinage Committee who called on him to determine his attitude.

Following the visit of the committee members, Morgenthau revealed that the Treasury Department had been making an investigation into the silver holdings of advocates of silver legislation and had found them "not entirely disinterested."

Morgenthau expressed the belief that the Administration "has found a combination of circumstances which is pulling this country out of the depression."

"As long as the present combination works, why change it?" he asked.

Meets Argument With Charts.

"If something goes radically wrong and we see we are going into another nose dive then we would get busy," he said. "But as long as things are going a little better each week, I think it is a good time to sit tight."

Morgenthau said the purpose of the Government's investigation of the ownership of silver speculative stocks on the New York market was frankly for the purpose of determining whether silver advocates were silver speculators. He said the report had not been completed and may never be made public.

The Coinage Committee members urged upon Morgenthau the desirability of silver legislation as a way out of the depression. He met their argument with price charts. One of the charts showed wholesale commodity prices for the entire world.

1,544,000 Ounces Received.

"It seems as though the United States is doing a little better than any other country," he said.

"I told the Representatives that we are constantly studying silver; that we feel that if the world ratifies the London silver agreement we are going a long way in taking care of the surplus silver for the next four years.

"I have an open mind as to what the next step should be. I still have to be shown that silver alone is a cure-all."

Morgenthau said producers are not turning in large quantities of silver to the mints under the President's guarantee to take a minimum of 24,000,400 ounces annually for four years at an average price of 64½ cents an ounce.

When asked the reason, he replied "gambling on the price."

2 Bills Reported Favorably.

The Representatives who saw Morgenthau were Somers, New York, chairman; White, Idaho; Swank, Oklahoma; Dies, Texas; Fiesinger, Ohio; Murdock, Utah and Burke, Nebraska, all Democrats; and Perkins (Republican), New Jersey.

The visit to the Treasury followed the action of the committee last Saturday in ordering reported favorably two bills dealing with silver. One is the Dies bill providing that foreign countries may pay with silver for agricultural products produced in the United States, the silver to be used as a basis for new currency. The other, the Fiesinger bill, would authorize the Government to purchase up to 1,500,000,000 ounces of silver in an attempt to lift commodity prices to the 1926 level.

Fiesinger has unged the Democratic Steering Committee to allow consideration of his bill, but the committee has not acted and it is understood the author of the measure was given little encouragement.

Ousted Minister Changes Church

Rev. B. L. Shipman Takes Baptist Post.

Richmond, March 15 (AP).—The Rev. B. L. Shipman, whose resignation from the Virginia Southern Methodist Conference was accepted last October, was announced today as associate pastor of Immanuel Baptist Church here.

The Rev. Mr. Shipman offered his resignation several months after a church appeals committee had set aside a verdict of the Virginia Conference trial board which found the minister guilty of conduct unbecoming a minister and expelled him. The appeals committee reinstated him and said there were mitigating circumstances involving acceptance of two glasses of eggnog at a Christmas party.

Although reinstated, the Rev. Mr. Shipman submitted his resignation. Meanwhile he had associated himself with the Baptist Church.

Motor Tag Prices Lower in Virginia

Distribution Expected to Be Over April 1.

Richmond, March 15 (AP).—Virginia's passenger automobile owners are not digging so deeply down into their jeans when they step up to the window today to purchase their 1934-35 State license tags.

The price of the tags dropped as low as $8 in some cases. Generally the price of the tag was between $12 and $15, under provisions of the law, which has reduced the price to 40 cents per hundred pounds weight.

The new tags—they have a black background with white numerals—went on sale at 107 depots throughout the State early today. The division of motor vehicles hopes to have practically all of the tags distributed by April 1.

Darrow's NRA Board Hears Powers Challenged

Mail Policies Are Defended By Robinson

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Flaying Senate critics of the Roosevelt air-mail policy as "hack politicians," Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson yesterday declared that the canceled contracts had been tinged with "fraud, collusion and illegality," and were accomplished "with the connivance and the incitement of Postmaster General Walter F. Brown and some of his chief deputies."

Replying to Republican speeches holding there was "no fraud" in the making of the contracts and that the President had sent ten Army fliers to their deaths, the Arkansan made the first detailed and formal defense of the Administration's position.

Meanwhile, the Senate Postoffice and Post Roads Committee announced that today it would hear Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who twice in 12 hours refused to serve on the Dern committee of inquiry into Army Air Corps mail operations. Col. Lindbergh, with Clarence Chamberlin, will testify regarding the bill permanently revising air-mail laws.

The committee yesterday heard Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, stormy petrel of the Army some years ago when his criticism of aviation policy led to his courtmartial, a reprimand and his subsequent resignation from the Air Corps. Close friend of President Roosevelt, Gen. Mitchell is now very much in the National aviation picture.

Leaving his Middleburg (Va.) farm and horses, the former flier came to the Capitol attired in tweeds and reiterated to the committee his already well-known views. He thought American aviation was "ten years behind," that the pending bill was "a step in the right direction" but that the Government should continue to carry the air mail and subsidize passenger airlines.

Gen. Mitchell urged a concentration of all Government aviation activities in one agency, a proposal which it appears is now receiving favorable consideration from the Roosevelt Administration, with the possibility that the former Army air chief might head such an agency.

The high light of the day's aviation developments, however, was the careful, studied defense which Senator Robinson made of the Administration's policy. As the Democrat read his prepared speech, Senator Fess (Republican), Ohio, leader of attacks on the Administration, listened attentively.

Senator Fess Visibly Embarrassed.

His face turned a vivid red, visible from the galleries, when Senator Robinson referred to the fee collected by the Ohioan's son from an air transport company. Later he said he would analyze for the Senate the testimony which Senator Robinson contended left no doubt whatever that the mail contracts were conceived in fraud.

"In the meanwhile I am glad of the opportunity to have heard the best possible defense of an indefensible action," Senator Fess added.

When the Arkansan had concluded, the Senate indulged in some fun over former Postmaster General Brown's high hat, which caused the Government to buy him a new automobile and the $20 hat recently given to Postmaster General James A. Farley by an aviation group in Texas.

"The recent cancellation of air-mail contracts because of fraud and collusion," asserted Senator Robinson, "was in keeping with the principles of morals and law, and the fraud of the contractors was accomplished with the connivance and the incitement of Postmaster General Brown and some of his chief deputies.

"Moreover, involved in the queer deals were extraordinary fees to connections of influential members of the Senate and other prominent politicians, which gave a political tinge to the whole matter and which brought about an attack on the present Administration by various hack politicians of the opposing political party."

Holds Defense Impossible.

He said these critics "could not defend the deals," they could not deny nor controvert "the confessions and other testimony which showed the former Postmaster General had deliberately called together the representatives of the aviation companies and arranged with them a program which utterly nullified the law in regard to awarding these contracts by competitive bids"—parcelling them out to three aviation combinations.

So the critics of the Administration, Senator Robinson continued, "seized" on the deaths of the Army fliers and undertook to put the Administration in the position of "deliberately and recklessly" sending men on a hazardous service for which they were unprepared and incompetent.

Enumerating by name the critics of the Administration Senator Robinson contended that they were drawing "a red herring across the trail of the collusive and fraudulent contracts" when they charge the Administration with "political murders."

He recalled that Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of Air Corps, had said the Army could handle the mail job, that 11 days had been given for preparation for the task, that none in that period had protested the inability of the Army and that after Army mail flights started there occurred "one of the worst periods of bad weather this country has known in a generation" and this contributed to the crashes.

Senator Robinson cited the law providing for cancellation of air-mail contracts where fraud or collusion was shown. He said the evidence was clear that the statute had been violated and the Administration's duty was to annul the contracts.

Turning to attack the Administration's critics, Senator Robinson cited the testimony of the Black committee paid by air mail companies to Lehr Fess, son of the Ohio Senator, and to Ernest W. Smoot, son of the former Republican Senator from Utah.

He pointed out that W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and a former Republican National committeeman; R. B. Chandler, Los Angeles publisher and close friend of Herbert Hoover and the Mellon family were interested in the contracts awarded by Brown.

Bingham Sharply Scored.

Citing the Sunday statement of former Senator Hiram Bingham, suggesting none had advised the President the Army could carry the mails, Senator Robinson said it "presumed to critcize the President for unethical conduct."

"If one were disposed to reply in kind," the Democrat added, "it might be said that Mr. Bingham is the only Senator in 100 years to have been officially censured by the Senate for unethical practices. He is not regarded here as an authority on what constitutes ethical conduct.

"Perhaps one who surreptitiously introduced a lobbyist into an executive tariff hearing under the guise of his clerk or secretary might not see anything wrong in awarding contracts in defiance of the law," he added.

Senator Robinson, asserting that "perhaps the most barefaced instance of double-crossing the Government was the employment of the extension provision of the law to avoid asking competitive bids," cited some of the evidence before the Black committee.

Out of Brown's administration of the air-mial contracts, he continued, "greedy men prostituted the effort to encourage the development of aviation to their own selfish purposes" and became multi-millionaires. In concluding he said the "instances of crookedness I have recited are merely a tithe of the total amount."

Virginians Lose Taste for Beer

Weak Beverage Brings In Small Revenue.

Richmond, March 15 (AP).—Virginia's taste for 3.2 beer hit a heavy slump during February, figures from the State tax department indicate. In that month, $21,695.60 was collected in excise tax, the smallest amount for any month since the beverage was legalized.

The total collected by the State in beer taxes was, however, far above the estimated revenue. There has been paid into the State's coffers $238,778.04, with six months still remaining in which to reach or better the estimate of $300,000 for the entire year.

Receipts since beer became legal have been as follows: September, $63,410.94; October, $47,105.84; November, 36,581.65; December, $36,258.48; January, $33,725.53, and February, $21,695.60.

Nominations Near For Middletown

Burgess Doub Expected to Return for 23d Term.

Middletown, Md., March 15 (Spl.). Burgess George L. Doub has set Friday evening, March 23, as the date for the annual nominating convention when candidates will be named for Burgess and three commissioner places.

The Burgess will be chosen for one year and the commissioners for two years. The commissioners, whose terms expire this year are Charles B. Darner, Edgar H. Koogle and L. Osmond Derr. The holdover members of the board are Lewis P. Miller and Morris R. Holter.

Burgess Doub has served 22 terms in office and is expected to be renominated without opposition.

Air Quiz Post Again Spurned By Lindbergh

all nine routes might not be started at the same time.

At the same time, the War Department issued a statement signed by Maj. Gen. B. D. Foulois, chief of the Air Corps, in which he declared "the Army Air Corps must be completely organized, equipped and trained to meet any National emergency upon 24 hours notice." Foulois is on an inspection trip preliminary to resumption of air-mail carrying.

Gen. Foulois declared that he "freely, frankly and without reservation" welcomed the opportunity for the Army to carry the mails.

He said that Army plans and policies for years have provided for frequent peace-time tests in order to determine whether the peacetime military fitness and efficiency of its personnel and material are adequate to meet any sudden Natinonal emergency. He pointed out that the air forces might be the country's first line of defense in event of such an emergency.

Should Be Well Trained.

"With this probability in mind," he said, "the air forces of our country should be as fully and completely organized, equipped and trained in time of peace as our Navy."

He said these peace-time tests should be carried out under conditions simulating war conditions.

"Army Air Corps peace-time tests," he said, "should be carried out under conditions which impose a reasonable amount of hardship, physical endurance, and even extra hazard, if necessary, in order that all pilots and mechanics may become at least partially inured in time of peace to the iron discipline and rigors of war-time service.

"The opportunity afforded the Army Air Corps to carry the air mail with but approximately ten days in which to prepare, constituted, in my belief, an ideal peacetime test of the Army Air Corps organization, equipment and training, and as chief of the Army Air Corps I freely, frankly and without reservation, welcomed this opportunity."

Gen. Foulois said he did not believe the hazards involved in carrying the mail were as great as those encountered by Army combat pilots in the normal performance of their duties. He repeated the statement he made in New York Wednesday that the public must be prepared for further fatalities in the Air Corps.

There Will Be Fatalities.

"With 25 years of flying experience behind me, I can frankly state that just so long as man flies there will be fatal accidents," the Air Corps chief asserted.

Gen. Foulois stressed the need for further development of aircraft safety devices and asked for sufficient appropriations to continue development of aircraft and accessories. He said that he had personally tested safety devices before permitting them to be used by other Army fliers.

The air-mail routes announced by the Postoffice Department include one from Newark to Atlanta and Jacksonville by way of Washington and one from Washington to Atlanta. There would be one plane on each route each day, the planes leaving one day and returning the next. Under this plan, only two mail planes would land in Washington each day.

Other routes include one round trip daily between Boston and Newark, one round trip daily between Chicago and Dallas, one round trip daily between Salt Lake City and San Diego, one round trip daily between Chicago and St. Paul, one round trip daily between Cheyenne and Denver, three round trips daily between Newark and Chicago, two trips both ways daily between Chicago and Salt Lake City, connecting with planes for San Francisco, thus forming a transcontinental route from Newark to Chicago to Salt Lake City to San Francisco.

Bingham Praises Lindbergh.

Former Senator Hiram Bingham, president of the National Aeronautic Association, yesterday described Col. Lindbergh's position as "unassailable."

"I think he was entirely justified in refusing to serve on the committee appointed by Secretary Dern to study the air-mail situation," he said.

Bingham expressed himself as disappointed in the advisory board appointed to study the performance of the Air Corps in carrying the mail. He said he believed pilots from the Army and Navy and civilian air experts should have been included on the board, which consists only of high Army staff officers.

NRA Loophole Plug Hits Ford, High-Pay Ally

where Ford dealers happened to bid low, as the Recovery Administration was unable to produce any evidence showing the Ford company was not in fact complying with the automobile code.

Now, however, the Ford company faces the direct choice of signing certificates agreeing to abide by its code or going without Government business. The issue, which may well precipitate another controversy between Dearborn, Mich., and the Recovery Administraton, is expected to come to a head on the next award for automobiles.

The new Executive order stipulates that all invitations for bids, issued by any agency of the Government, including the numerous New Deal corporations, must contain a provision that bids include or be accompanied by certificates of compliance with the bidders' codes of fair competition. In the event no such code has yet been promulgated, the bidder must agree to abide by the President's reemployment agreement.

Others Out of Running.

Setting out that no bid will be considered which does not meet this condition, the order further stipulates:

"No agency of the United States and no Government contractor or supplier shall hereafter accept or purchase for the performance of any contract or purchase order or enter into any subcontracts for any articles, materials or supplies, in whole or in part produced or furnished by any person who shall not have certified that he is complying with and will continue to comply with each code of fair competition which relates to such articles, materials or supplies, or in case there is no approved code for the whole or any portion thereof, then, to that extent, with an agreement with the President as aforesaid."

These provisions likewise apply to all contracts and purchase orders authorized by any State, municipality, or corporation in connection with projects carried out, wholly or in part, with funds loaned or granted by the Federal Government. They are not, however, to restrict materials to those produced in this country "nor to require price differentials in favor or such materials."

Falsification Punishable.

The penalty for falsely certifying code compliance was set at $500 fine, or six months' imprisonment, or both, with the contractor liable for any expense occasioned by cancellation of contract.

Any disputes arising between a Government agency and any contractor are to be submitted to the administrator for industrial recovery—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson—for final determination. The order also allows Gen. Johnson to make specific exceptions in cases where he believes "justice or public interest will best be served thereby."

The new order goes far beyond the President's original order, which merely stipulates that bidders must comply with NRA requirements. In the first case, Gen. Johnson was overruled in the belief that certificates of compliance were required and the new order strengthens his hand by just this requirement.

Meanwhile, the Ford case has simmered down to the lengthy dispute with employes of the Edgewater, N. J., and Chester, Pa., plants. No final determination has yet been reached concerning whether the motor company actually is recognizing the "collective bargaining" principle of the NIRA.

Bloom Funeral To Be Held Tod

Congregational Church Divine Expires.

Funeral services for the Rev. Dr. W. Knighton Bloom, 68, of 1601 Argonne place, Eastern secretary of the Congregational and Christian Church Extension Board, who died Wednesday night, will be held at Broadway Tabernacle today at 4:30 p. m. Burial will be tomorrow morning in Jackson Heights, Long Island.

Dr. Bloom had made his home here since 1927.

On February 1, 1866, Dr. Bloom was born in Dorcester, Yorkshire County, England. He was ordained minister in the Congregational Church in 1898, and in 1900 became a naturalized citizen of the United States. He was president of the board of directors of the Country Life Academy, Star, N. C, and a member of the alumni council of the University of Chicago. He contributed articles frequently to church publications.

Dr. Bloom is survived by his wife, Mrs. Emma Mills Bloom, and a son, William Knighton Bloom, of New York.

Mission Worker In Jefferson Dies

Mrs. Georgia L. Campbell Was Ill Long Time.

Charles Town, W. Va., March 15 (Spl.).—Mrs. Georgia Locke Campbell, missionary worker of Jefferson County, died yesterday after a long illness at Christ's Church Mission, near Rock Ferry.

For the past year she had charge of the mountain mission. She was the widow of G. L. Campbell and the daughter of John C. Campbell and Elizabeth Riley Campbell, of Berryville, Va. She is survived by two sisters, Mrs. W. C. Stump, Washington, and Mrs. John Ritchie, Cleveland.

Funeral services will be tomorrow at the Zion Episcopal Church, with interment in Berryville.

Inmate Challenge Penalty Given in 1933.

Although he pleaded guilty of violating the National prohibition act and was sentenced in June, 1933, Harry T. Johnson yesterday obtained a writ of habeas corpus in the District Supreme Court to test the validity of his imprisonment.

He was sentenced to serve from a year to a year and a half and claims that the sentence now is without force because of the recent United States Supreme Court decision wiping out prosecution of Volstead act offenders.

The petition was filed by Johnson as his own attorney. In pursuance of the writ, Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue ordered a hearing March 19.

Ickes Shifts Power Over Pwa Roads

Inspection Authority Is Given to Bureau.

Supervision and inspection of road projects of States and counties financed by the Jublic Works Administration have been transferred to the Bureau of Public Roads, Secretary Ickes announced yesterday.

The move will relieve the inspection division of PWA of the responsibility of caring for such roads and highways. Inspectors of the roads bureau will check all work.

Among the road projects transferred to the Bureau of Roads is a loan and grant project of Maryland involving $5,411,866 of PWA money. Other large projects include programs in New York, New England and Missouri.

Parley on Alleged State Debt Called

Collector's Interpretation of Contract Is Involved.

Richmond, March 15 (AP).—A conference between State fiscal officers and Geddes H. Winston and his counsel, will be held next week in an effort to untangle his alleged debt of $18,160.60 to the Commonwealth.

Winston is a collector of delinquent taxes for the State comptroller under a contract. Recently an audit revealed, the comptroller's office asserts, that he received more than $10,000 in commissions during each of several years just passed. Senator Hill Montague, counsel for Winston, has said that the matter is a civil one involving the interpretation of the contract between Winston and the State.

The conference was originally set for today.

Vinton Mayor Declines To Run; 5 Nominated

Roanoke, Va., March 15 (Spl.). Mayor H. H. Dowdy, of Vinton, Roanoke suburb, has declined to stand for reelection after serving two terms, and five persons were nominated for the post at a recent mass meeting. They are D. F. Herman, J. H. Moseley, J. W. Reynolds, C. C. Crockett and Arthur Craddock. Herman and Moseley are members of the town council.

Seven persons were nominated for town council. The election will be in June, and winners will take office in September.

U.S. Takes Over Grand Coulee Power Project

the Boulder Dam development of the Southwest.

The Grand Coulee development is a $62,000,000 project. The project was approved by the PWA in July, and $63,000,000 was allotted for the work.

Secretary Ickes explained yesterday, however, that because the project ran counter to provisions of the State of Washington's constitution, it had been decided to drop State participation and take over the development as a Federal project. It will be handled by the Bureau of Reclamation of the Interior Department.

To affect the transfer to the Federal Government, the PWA reconsidered all previous allotments and resolutions adopted on the matter, Ickes said, and authorized the change. A sum of $15,000,000 was made available to the Reclamation Bureau to finance construction of working quarters and a bridge and other preliminary work.

Primary importance attached to the announcement was seen as the actual carrying out of an extensive Federal policy of establishing Government-owned power plants. Muscle Shoals and the Tennessee Valley, Boulder Dam, the Grand Coulee and its two associated dams, in addition to other smaller irrigation and power developments undertaken by PWA in Western States, will produce an amount of electrical energy rivaling the output of many large power groups throughout the country.

Inspired by Ickes.

This production will place the Government deeply in the power business, in many places, as direct rivals of private power development. This situation finds its counterpart, if not part of its inspiration, in the attitude of Secretary Ickes on Government-owned power production. The Interior Secretary, it is known, holds a belief that naturatl power resources of the Nation should be utilized directly for the people, rather than through private industry.

The Bonneville, Oreg., development on the Columbia already is in the process of construction by Army engineers. This dam, whose power area will supplement that of the Grand Coulee, will be paid for with a $20,250,000 PWA atllotment. The total cost, with all developments included, will be around $31,000,000. In addition to creating power and aiding flood and erosion control, this will make the Columbia navigable up to the mouth of the Snake River, in Idaho. Bonneville is 40 miles above Portland, Oreg.

The Grand Coulee development in eastern Washington, however, will nearly dwarf the Bonneville project. The Grand Coulee Dam alone will cost $40,000,000. Its power plants will cost $19,137,971, and interest during construction is estimated at $2,963,000.

The dam will be situated atbout 22 miles north of Almira, Wash., and will be 335 feet high and 3,430 feet long. It will back up a lake 50 miles long. The original equipment in the power plant is planned to produce 700,000 horsepower with room for addtional installations.

Explaining the conversion of the project to the Federal Government, Secretary Ickes commented:

"Representations made concerning the State's ability to fulfill the conditions of the allotment did not materialize because of constitutional, legislative and legal difficulties. Therefore, the project will become entirely a Government project, with title to the dam and control over the distribution and sale of power resting in the Government."

Wide Scope of Projects.

The third principal development in the Northwest, the Casper-Alcova project, is located north of Capper, Wyo., and was designed as an irrigation, river regulation and power development. It will cost $15,900,000 and will produce an annual output of 150,000,000 kilowatt-hours.

The announcement also called attention to pending legislation for further power developments, principally the Norris bill to develop the Missouri River Valley in a manner comparable to the Tennessee Valley.

Should the St. Lawrence waterway bill be returned successfully to a future Congress with power provisions, the power industry of the Nation will be confronted with the Federal Government in the power business in the Southeast, the Southwest, the Northwest, the Middle West and the Northeast, primary areas of the country.

Wheat Parley Envoys Named

President Designates Three to Attend Rome Conference.

President Roosevelt announced the appointment yesterday of three delegates to the International Wheat Advisory Committee to be held in Rome April 5.

American representatives will be John Van Antwerp MacMurray, Minister to the Baltic states; Mordecai Ezekiel, economic adviser to the Secretary of Agriculture, and Frederick E. Murphy, of Minneapolis.

The wheat committee, provided for by the international wheat agreement signed at London last August, meets periodically to note the working of the agreement. Major exporting and importing countries are parties to the agreement.

The Rome meeting will review progress and recommend adjustments.

McCarl Favors Shannon Bill As Right Step

Comptroller Tells Value in Plan to Check All U.S. Property.

(Associated Press.)

J. R. McCarl, Comptroller General, told the House Expenditures Committee yesterday that the Shannon bill to establish a uniform cost-accounting system in the Government would be a correct step toward proper supervision of the expenditure of Federal moneys.

He remarked that under existing law, the Controller has supervision only over the expenditure of money. After the money is converted into property, he continued, the department which holds the property has sble control and responsibility.

He recommended, therefore, inclusion of a stipulation in the bill for "some accounting for the use of the property."

"With such an accounting system," McCarl testified, 'it would be possible to determine definitely whether appropriations made by Congress for specific purposes had been improperly used."

Michelet Burial Services Today

Last rites for Robert Henry Michelet, 22, Dartmouth College honor student and athlete, will be held at 3 p. m. today at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Simon Michelet, 1636 Argonne place.

The body of Michelet, who was known as Dartmouth's outstanding undergraduate, lay in state at the college chapel for two hours before it was started on its journey home.

Michelet died of pneumonia. He was known here for his activities at Central High School. He attended Mercersburg Academy before going to Dartmouth. At Dartmouth he had been selected for a Rhodes scholarship.

and whom many other countries have refused to receive.

A police patrol was placed about his luxurious flat. Crowds of curiosity-seekers, officials, and reporters besieged his stronghold. Through these lines Insull apparently made his way undetected.

Personal servants, and Mme. Kuyemujoglu, the Greek wife of a Bagdad date merchant, also were taken into custody and questioned about the flight without result.

Numerous islands in the Aegean belong to Greece, Italy and Turkey, all of which have said they will have none of the fugitive.

One report was that he might have sought refuge in the mountains of Albania whose fierce hillmen would protect him if it were worth their while.

Greek Officials Weary.

The Greek government, giving the impression that it was tired of the whole Insull affair and succession of delays on his pleas of illness, had reiterated earlier that the former utilities executive would have to leave Greece today.

The alien control department, however, said no visa was obtainable for him. Yesterday Insull refused to accept an American consular travel document, given as a matter of cooperation with the Greek foreign affairs office.

Police had gone the rounds of diplomatic offices seeking necessary entry permits but apparently without success. All representatives of foreign nations appeared wary of accepting the responsibility of harboring Insull, whom American authorities want returned to face charges growing out of the collapse of the far-flung Insull enterprises.

Mrs. D. F. Hedrick Buried.

Lewisburg, W. Va., March 15 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held in Richlands yesterday for Mrs. D. F. Hedrick, 78, who died Monday in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Connie Skaggs, near here. She was born in Greenbrier County and is survived by her husband, four daughters, and five sons.

Bride Rejects Prior Approval Of Utility Plans

Denies Board's Authority to Order Submission of Improvements.

The authority of the Public Utilities Commission to require utility concerns to obtain its approval before starting any improvements costing more than $10,000, was denied yesterday by Corporation Counsel William W. Bride as his last official act.

The commission promulgated a tentative order in anuary directing utility companies to seek its sanction before commencing major improvements or extensions. Various companies challenged the order.

Bride declared, "I am unable to find any provisions of the public utilities act which would authorize the commission to require a utility to obtain its consent before starting any improvements. The commission may require the utility to report expenditures, but it has no authority to compel the companies to seek its permission before starting improvements."

District officials declared the opinion allows utilities to go ahead with any improvements, but ultimately the commission will decide whether such improvements are useful and if they are deemed unnecessary the commission may decree that the cost can not be used as part of the valuation for rate making.

and got nowhere. It is a pretty tough proposition."

Collins had been pleading all day for the chairman to bring back the manufacturers into conference. He made such an impression on the members that they adjourned temporarily to consider the question before Chairman Williams announced the decision. "We want the law to function," he said. "The General Motors, Chrysler and the others never have appeared before the Detroit Regional Labor Board. You must decide now whether you are letting them go with only a statement that your action entails nothing on them."

Tells Labor's Demands.

Reading from a prepared statement, Knudsen stated that on March 5 the Buick Company of Flint, Mich., had received a telegram from an A. F. of L. local requesting a 20 per cent wage increase, a 30-hour week, seniority to prevail in the laying off or rehiring of men, a survey of the "speed-up" system, and other concessions. The officers of the local asked for a conference within 48 hours.

"This was the first intimation the company had of any dissatisfaction of the Buick employes," said Knudsen. "We do not know how many thousands of our employes are willing to be represented by Federal Labor Union No. 18512."

He went on to present the company's position, with the statement: "Having signed the automobile code which expires September 8, 1934, and confers no advantage whatsoever upon employers, we have conscientiously endeavored to live up to both the letter and the spirit of its obligations."

Voted by Employes.

Knudsen explained that last fall employes plans of representation were adopted in practically all the General Motors plants. "Not only were they the free choice of our employes, but on the average they were adopted by a vote of over 80 per cent of all employes," he said. "Through the employes' works councils, all disputes, where direct negotiations were resorted to, have been settled. Despite the fact that our hourly rates of wages are as high as in 1929 and weekly earnings, on the average, are only slightly less, we were confronted, upon 48 hours' notice, with the present situation."

The General Motors executive announced that his company was prepared to see to it that "no group of our employes, not even a single employe, shall be coerced into being represented by any works council, labor union or outside representation not of their own choosing."

Irish Holiday

Senator (Pat) McCarran Seeks Observance Here.

St. Patrick's Day, March 17, should be a legal holiday in the National Capital, Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, said yesterday.

The Nevadan's smiling statement was made at a meeting of the Senate District Committee during a discussion of a division of the committee work among the members, all of whom have beenassigned to many tasks on regular and special committees.

"I think I shall give notice of my purpose to introduce a bill making St. Patrick's Day a legal holiday in the District," Senator McCarran aid. Several spectators clapped.

"Well, as another Irishman, I promise the Senator I will vote for his bill," Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, committee chairman, said.

Fireman Freed Of Rum Count

Defense He Was Ill, Not Intoxicated, Wins Acquittal.

Intoxication charges against a District fireman, pending since March 3, were dismissed by Judge Given in Police Court yesterday.

Judge Given interrupted defense testimony to release Fireman Kenneth L. Martin, attached to No. 24 Engine Co. Martin was arrested several weeks ago near Fifteenth and H streets northeast. Policeman E. R. Lohr, of the Traffic Bureau, said he was staggering.

Martin, absent from duty on sick leave, complained that he was ill. He was charged with being drunk, however, and was placed in a cell at the Ninth Precinct Station.

Dr. George Earley, assistant police and fire surgeon, testified he examined Martin soon after his arrest, but found no evidence of liquor. Several witnesses were unable to say whether he was ill or intoxicated.

Dill Will Ask A. T. & T. Probe For 'Monopoly'

Washingtonian Is Desirous of Having Pecora as Investigator.

Investigation of the alleged "monopoly" of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. by a Senate committee will be proposed within a few days by Senator Dill (Democrat), Washington, chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

Dill said he would like, if possible, to have Ferdinand Pecora, recently in charge of the stock market investigation, conduct the inquiry.

"It is necessary to investigate all the ramifications of the telephone business," the Washington senator said. "Here is an organization that never has been investigated, but has been allowed to form a monopoly without supervision."

Dill's announcement of his intention to introduce a resolution next week calling for the probe came at the conclusion yesterday of committee hearings on the so-called communications bill, creating a Federal commission to regulate all wire, cable and radio services.

If the banking committee plans no hearings before the summer recess, Dill said, he will ask that Pecora be named investigator of the A. T. & T.

Witnesses before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee have criticized the A. T. & T. for alleged monopolistic practices. The American Federation of Labor, Dill said, is among organizations requesting the inquiry. E. H. Nockels, of the A. F. of L., and Frank Powers, international president of the Commercial Telegraphers Union, told the committee the A. T. & T. had a monopoly.

One point of criticism was that the company made it wires available for telegraph purposes at lower rates than when they were used for telephone communications.

Witnesses yesterday opposed and favored the bill. The Rev. John B. Harney, superior general of the Paulist Fathers, owners and operators of Station WLWL, approved the radio provisions and protested against the alleged monopolistic control of radio. The new commission, he said, should initiate a policy of regulation.

Chester Leasure, of the United States Chamber of Commerce, opposed the bill as too drastic, saying it would interfere with the efficiency of the communications services.

Russians Search Japanese Vessel

Radio Equipment Found on "Fishing" Ship.

Moscow, March 15 (U.P.).—Tension in the Far East was increased tonight by reports from Vladivostok that Soviet frontier guards had discovered the Japanese schooner Tatsi Maru a half mile off Askold Island, at the entrance to Vladivostok Bay.

The captain of the ship declared he was engaged in "scientific fishing," but had been forced to halt by engine trouble. Soviet officials said they found long and short wave radio equipment on board.

Naval experts examining data seized on the Japanese vessel said the schooner apparently was engaged in "espionage."

Kentuckian, Is Pardoned In Mine War Shooting

Frankfort, Ky., March 15 (AP).—William Burnett, convicted in connection with the battle of Evarts in Harlan County in which three persons were slain in the spring of 1931, was granted a full pardon today by Gov. Laffoon.

Burnett, a coal miner, was sentenced to three years on conviction of wounding Frank White after having been acquitted of slaying a deputy sheriff in the labor disorders. The pardon stated the trial judge had expressed serious doubt that Burnett should have been convicted.

Revised Navy Plan to Drop 920 Officers

Marine Corps Cut Also Urged; Authority Is Clarified.

Curtailment by 920 of the authorized peace-time strength of the officer staff of the Navy to be replaced where needed by post-graduate officers of the line was recommended yesterday by a special reorganization board headed by Assistant Secretary Henry L. Roosevelt.

The recommendations of the board have been approved by President Roosevelt and Secretary Swanson and will be effected through changes to be made in existing Navy regulations under White House supervision.

Recommendations also were made for reduction of the authorized peace-time officer strength of the Marine Corps from 1,063 to 991, to be accomplished by removal of officers affected by Navy staff curtailment proposals. The board's report dismisses summarily frequently rumored consideration of unification of the corps under Navy command.

Affected by the staff reduction recommendations are the Medical Corps, to be cut from 1,207 to 745; the Chaplain Corps, reduced from 149 to 76; Construction Corps, 275 to 140; Supply Corps, 660 to 440; Civil Engineers Corps, 110 to 60. The strength of the Dental Corps is to remain at 186, the board recommending maintenance of its officer strength at a ratio of one for every 500 of totay Navy and Marine Corps personnel.

Reductions are to be accomplished by "Normal attrition and by filling only one vacancy in three in each corps until the new peace-time strength is reached." Abolition of the paymaster's department of the Marine Corps and absorbtion of its functions by the quartermaster's department also was recommended.

Elimination of conflict in authority between the office of the Assistant Secretary and the chief of operations was aimed at in the board's report, which would assign all non-military activities to the former and confine direction of the fleet to the operations chief. Each would operate separately and be responsible to the Secretary.

Congressional approval of several of the board's recommendations, notably its action looking to reduction of Marine Corps officer strength, probably will be required.

Radical proposals for Navy reorganization were held by the board to lack "sufficient promise of improvement in the war efficiency of the fleet or economy in expenditure of public funds to justify adoption at the present time."

900 District Residents Over 75 Years, in Gainful Pursuits

Men Work at Driving Trucks, and Other Heavy Jobs.

Activities of District residents who are 75 years of age or older, brought into emphasis by old age pension and life extension programs, cover a wide range of vocations and professions. This is revealed by census reports and other authentic data.

Work done by aged persons here is shown to reach far beyond the bounds of endeavor ordinarily associated with advanced years. And the ability of venerable Washingtonians to "keep going" long after the span of "three score and ten years" has been passed is broadly indicated.

According to most reliable estimates, there are at least 900 persons in Washington who have reached the age of 75 years and who are entitled to listing among the "gainfully employed." The total probably approaches the 950 mark, with approximately 200 being women.

Pursuits followed in largest numbers by Washington men who are in the "75-year or older" group include the following: Carpentering, construction labor, real estate agency operations, guarding and watching, legal and judicial practice, janitor and sexton service and clerking.

The corresponding list for women sets forth the following as major vocational and professional classes: Dressmakers and seamstresses not in factories, laundresses not in laundries, servants, clerks, lodging and boarding-house keepers, housekeepers and stewardesses.

Groups in which it is rather surprising to find representations of male residents of the District who are 75 years of age or older include:

Chauffeurs and truck and tractor drivers, telegraph operators, deliverymen, laborers in coal and lumber yards, dentists, nurses (not trained), and messenger, errand and office "boys" other than telegraph messengers.

In the field of domestic and personal service, women 75 years of age or older are found working as:

Barbers, hairdressers and manicurists, charwomen and cleaners, laundry operatives, untrained nurses.

The corresponding list of professional services includes:

Artists, sculptors and teachers of art; authors, editors and reporters; designers and draftsmen, lawyers, librarians, musicians and teachers of music, physicians and surgeons, religious workers, teachers of athletics and dancing, school teachers, trained nurses.

Boston & Maine Given PWA Loan

Ickes Awards $2,230,000 to Buy Equipment.

Contract for a Public Works Administration loan of $2,230,000 to the Boston & Maine Railroad Co. was signed yesterday by Secretary Ickes. The money will go toward purchase of rails and maintenance of line.

Allotments for loans of $3,895,000 to two other railroad companies also were announced. One was for $3,895,000 to the Great Northern Railway, the other a loan of $75,000 to the receivers of the Fort Smith & Western Railway in Oklahoma.

Ickes announced an additional contract covering a loan of $2,628,000 to the Boston & Maine is in preparation. He stated the Great Northern has applied for an additional loan of $1,305,000 for purchase of rails.

"Blue Sultan" Seeks Protection of Spain

Madrid, March 15 (AP).—Premier Lerroux today announced he had heard from Morocco saying "the Blue Sultan," leader of the rebellious Moors in French Morocco, had surrendered himself to the Spanish garrison, seeking protection as a political exile.

Recent dispatches said a heavy "mop-up" campaign by the French Foreign Legion in Morocco had put the rebel Moors on the run.

Stock Control Bill Is Modified To Win Support

Provisions Wall Street Protested Are Being Made Less Severe.

(Associated Press.)

Revision of the stock exchange control bill at the direction of the Treasury is directed frankly toward relaxation of drastic features which had threatened to prevent its enactment.

With departmental officers, officials of the Federal Reserve system and the experts who framed the original Fletcher-Rayburn measure meeting again yesterday, Secretary Morgenthau said "real progress" had been made and the measure would be put in such form that Congress would approve it.

'Our orders are to fix it so the bill will get through Congress and become law," he said. "The President wants the bill and it is coming along fine."

The bill was drafted originally by Ferdinand Pecora, who directed the Senate investigation of Wall street practices, and James Landis, of the Federal Trade Commission, both advocates of strong Governmental regulation. The measure stipulated a minimum cash margin of 60 per cent, abolished numerous practices considered questionable, provided for corporate financial statements at frequent intervals, and gave the Trade Commission responsibility for administration and enforcement.

Wall street quickly and emphatically protested. Conservative members of Congress also indicated they thought the measure too drastic.

Chairman Fletcher of the Senate Banking Committee called for hearings today on the revised bill. However, those in charge of the rewriting were doubtful if it would be ready by then.

An arrangement will be worked out in the new bill to avoid the necessity of a wholesale liquidation of bank loans on securities as a result of the minimum margin restrictions, and the latter will be widely modified.

$60,000 Orchestra Fund Drive Goal

5 Campaign Groups Aid National Symphony.

Captains and members of the five campaign teams working to raise the $60,000 sustaining fund for the National Symphony Orchestra will meet this afternoon at 12:30 o'clock in the home of Mrs. James Clement Dunn. Plans will be made to interest every music lover in the city.

Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe is campaign chairman, and the captains of teams are Mrs. Eliphalet F. Andrews, Mrs. Alan Kirk, Mrs. Reeve Lewis, Mrs. Carey H. Brown and Miss Persia Myers. At today's meeting reports will be made and quotas arranged for each team.

Only one-half of the amount necessary to assure the continuation of concerts by the National Symphony Orchestra next season has thus far been contributed or pledged. It is hoped that the complete fund will have been raised by the end of March so that the association can proceed with its plans for the 1934-35 season and engage musicians.

Chief Admits Police Crooked

Norfolk, Va., March 15 (Spl.). There are crooked policemen on the Norfolk force, Chief of Police S. W. Ironmonger said today.

The statement came in response to a charge made by Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney James E. Heath, jr., yesterday, at the trial of George C. Shackelford, who was convicted of hijacking a police patrol wagon loaded with confiscated whisky.

Shackelford was sentenced to four years in the penitentiary. He testified he had paid money and given whisky to Patrolman E. R. Benjamin, who drove the wagon.

"I believe there are crooked policemen in my department, but I do not believe Benjamin is one of them," said Ironmonger.

"I am satisfied the evidence Benjamin gave in the Shackelford case was true. I am convinced he never accepted any favors from any lawbreaker. It was just an attempt to muddy the issue. Shackelford probably thought if he could make the jury believe Benjamin was crooked, he might get off.

"I am making a close investigation of the evidence in the case," Ironmonger added, "and if irregular practices are disclosed, proper action will be taken."

12-Year-Old Offense Costs Suspect Freedom

Twele years ago Enoch Barnes, colored, was convicted of a larceny charge. Yesterday it cost him 30 days in jail when he was arraigned on similar charges before Police Court Judge Isaac Hitt.

Barnes was accused of taking a basket of spinach from a U street grocery store. "I was hungry, judge," Barnes pleaded, "and needed the food." Judge Hitt prepared to place him on probation, but records revealed at 12-year-old offense.

Charcoal Makes Itself Through Latest Method

Eugene, Oreg., March 15 (AP).—A new method of making charcoal, which works on the principle of both keeping your cake and eating it, was announced today at the University of Oregon.

A stream of chipped wood is fed into a new type of rotating cylinder. Heat drives the gases out of the wood, and these gases are burned to make the cylinder hot enough to carbonize the wood.

'Client' Bandit Robs Manager Of $538 Cash

Loan Firm Official Looks in Gun Barrel as He "Makes Change."

Police last night searched for an unidentified gunman who held up William S. Herndon, manager of the Southwest Branch of the Fidelity Loan & Trust Association, 431 Eleventh street southwest, yesterday morning, and escaped with $538.

The robber entered the establishment in the guise of a client, seeking change. "Can you change this bill?" he asked Herndon, who lives at 7212 Blair road, Takoma Park.

Herndon, who had just taken the money from the safe and put it in the cash drawer, began to count out small bills when the robber covered him with a pistol, marched him into a back room, scooped up the money and fled.

The thief was described as being about 30 years old, sallow, clad in a blue suit and a soiled slouch hat. He had several days' growth of beard, Herndon told police.

Law Enforcement Medals Given Two

Kelley's Captor, Prosecutor of Zangara, Cited.

Two officials in the South have been awarded the law enforcement medal of the United States Flag Association, Senator Robert R. Reynolds, of North Carolina, chairman of the executive board, announced yesterday.

Chief of Detectives William T. Griffin, of Memphis, Tenn., who captured "Machine Gun" Kelley, was honored by the society, as was State's Attorney N. Vernon Hawthorne, of Miami, Fla., who prosecuted Guiseppe Zangara, murderer of Mayor Cermak of Chicago, and would-be assassin of President Roosevelt.

The medal for the District recently was declined by J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice.

Fruit Men Hit Federal Loans As Slow, Rigid

West Virginians Ask Fast Action and Modifying of Regulations.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 15 (Spl.).—West Virginia Horticultural Society's executive committee, meeting with additional larger growers here today, urged corrective action on three things they declare are distinct faults in present Federal farm aid in this section.

Protest was entered against these things:

(1) The delay in issuing crop-production loans, as the time is drawing near when fertilizer must be sown and spraying started.

(2) Requiring so much more collateral and security from company-owned orchards than from individually owned orchards that company-owned plantations are practically barred, and, in some cases, have been forced to give up the effort to obtain loans for crop production and for long-term land loans.

(3) The appraising and approval system now in use, which the growers believe sets up perfect banking security as the first object in these loans, with any financial aid to the grower only incidental.

In asking speedier action on production loans, growers realized that this matter lies in the "upper reaches" of the Farm Credit Administration. The directors of East-Central Fruit Growers Production Credit Association—E. Lee Goldsborough, Phil H. Gold, J. H. Karns, J. Walter Engler and Frank Richardson—have disposed quickly of the total of $370,000 in applications made by growers of the five States of the belt.

The letter from the executive committee was sent to Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace; Gov. William I. Myers, of the Farm Credit Administration; Commissioner S. M. Garwood, of FCA; Gov. Mackey, of Baltimore District, FCA, and President George Stephenson, of Production Credit Corporation, Baltimore; also to West Virginia and Virginia Senators and Representatives and to influential horticultural societies of other States.

Farley Praises Tercentenary As First Stamps Are Printed

Other Officials Take Part in Brief Maryland Ceremony.

By Marion Butler.

Whirring presses at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing turned out the first sheets of the new scarlet and white Maryland Tercentenary stamps at noon yesterday.

Simple ceremonies attended by Postoffice and Maryland State officials marked the turning of the press switches by Postmaster General James A. Farley.

As the first sheet of stamps rolled off the huge flat-bed presses, Postmaster General Farley said, "It has been most gratifying for the department to give official recognition to the Maryland Tercentenary celebration through the issuance of this special stamp," and added that he believed it would be "an extremely popular commemorative issue."

David C. Winebrenner 3d, Secretary of State of Maryland, officially thanked Postoffice officials on behalf of the State and was presented the first sheet of the new stamps.

Other officials gathered around the presses were Ambrose O'Connell, executive assistant to the Postmaster General; William L. Slattery, comptroller of the Post Office Department; former Senator John S. Cohen, of Georgia; Alvin W. Hall, Director of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing; Roy North, Deputy Third Assistant Postmaster General, and Robert E. Fellers, superintendent, Division of Stamps.

Fifty million of the new stamps will be printed and ready for sale next Friday at the postoffice at St. Marys City, Md., and on the following day at all other postoffices throughout the country.

The stamp is of 3-cent denomination. It was designed by Edward Tunis, of Baltimore, and has as its central motif the Ark and Dove, the two vessels which brought Maryland's first colonists to their settlement at St. Marys City 300 years ago. Across its top is the inscription "Maryland Tercentenary," while on a white background the Maryland coat of arms appears, in contrast to the brilliant red foreground.

Church to Hold Centenary Rite In Early Fall

Charlottesville, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—The board of stewards of the First Methodist Church last night adopted plans for celebrating the church's centennial in the early fall.

The centennial program, to last for four days, will be arranged by A. L. Bennett, superintendent of county schools, and Dr. Wilson Gee, University of Virginia professor; Mrs. O. T. Allegrez and Miss Mayme Wilson.

Sermons will be preached by two bishops of the Southern Methodist Church, and an outstanding missionary will speak. A history of the church will be read at a night meeting. A reception will be held for former pastors and presiding elders who have served the church and Charlottesville district. A musical program will be given each day of the celebration.

The church building, one of the largest and most modern in the Southern Methodist Church, was erected and equipped at a cost of $250,000 a decade ago under the pastorate of Dr. H. P. Myers, now of Lynchburg, Va. The Sunday school plant is said to be the most complete to be found in any church in this country. Dr. George E. Booker is the pastor.

The Charlottesville church was established in 1834. In June of that year William Hammett purchased the building site from Mary Wales, and other representatives of Thomas Ball, and in the ensuing October conveyed it to Gessner Harrison, of the school of Latin at the University of Virginia, and Nathan C. Goodman and Thomas Pace, as trustees, for a Methodist church.

The first Methodist preacher on record in Albamarle County was Athanasius Thomas, who was licensed to celebrate the rites of matrimony in 1793. About the beginning of the century two laymen came from Maryland and filled the place of local preachers, John B. Magruder and George Jones. In November, 1823, a district conference met in Charlottesville, of which James Boyd was president and Walker Timberlake secretary.

From 1825 to 1837 there was a great accession of church buildings in Albemarle County. In Charlottesville, the Episcopal church was built in 1825; in 1827, the Presbyterian church, and in 1836, the Disciples church.

Pioneer Clerk Of Court Dead

Morgan S. Harmison, 82, in Public Life for Half Century.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., March 15 (Spl.).—Morgan S. Harmison, 82, who served in public life in Morgan County for nearly half a century, died suddenly at his home here late last night.

He was a native of this county and elected a member of the first county court set up in Morgan in 1881 and served for two years. In 1896 he was elected sheriff and served a four-year term. In 1902 he was elected clerk of the county court and served without interruption for 30 years, retiring at the end of 1932.

He is survived by his widow, formerly Miss Martha Prudence Thompson, of this county, and nine of the 13 children born to them: Mrs. N. C. Pattie, Washington; George, Baltimore; Mrs. Clara Hovermale, Mrs. C. L. Hunter, Mrs. Vernon E. Johnson, Mrs. Etta Smith, Mrs. Leonard Collier and Miss Mae Harmison, of this county; M. S. Harmison, jr., Sleepy Creek, W. Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Harmison observed their fifty-fifth wedding anniversary in September, 1931, when all surviving children and 17 grandchildren were present.

Services will be held Saturday afternoon with burial here.

2 Alleghany Spans Assigned for Bids

Rail Bridge Over Jackson River to Go.

Covington, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—The State highway department this week asked for bids on two bridge projects in Alleghany County.

One bridge will be over the Jackson River here on Route 647 where the old Chesapeake & Ohio Railway bridge on the Potts Creek Branch now stands. The railroad has discontinued the branch line and the old structure will be replaced by a modern 395-foot bridge.

The other bridge to be rebuilt is on U. S. Route 60 over the Cowpasture River at Sharon Church near Clifton Forge. The State's list contained six other projects.

Judge Wilson Named To Disbarment Trial

Richmond, March 15 (Spl.).—Judge R. T. Wilson of the hustings court of Petersburg, has been designated by Chief Justice Campbell of the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals to sit with Judge Frederick W. Coleman, of Fredericksburg, and Judge John I. Ingram, of Richmond, in the disbarment trial of Charles Ferrell and Joseph Z. Johnson, Richmond attorneys.

The Richmond Bar Association has charged unprofessional conduct by the defendants. The trial is set for April 6.

Abe Gellman is president; Sam Ende, vice president; Rabbi Reich, secretary, and Isadore Sollod, treasurer. The executive committee includes Louis Levitt, Sam Hopkins, Harry Sollod and Hyman Mersel.

Stovewood Racket Trips Housewives

Cheap Fuel Is Promised, Cash Down First.

Charlottesville, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—Several Charlottesville housewives have been victimized for small sums in a stovewood racket worked as follows:

A man appears at the kitchen door and says he is selling firewood, but has run out of gasoline and is unable to return home. He assures the housekeeper he is willing to bring a load of firewood for only 25 or 50 cents if the money is paid in advance.

This tempting offer has been taken in a number of cases, but the wood seller never returns.

County Agents Face Pay Shift

West Virginia Law Puts Salary Burden on State and U. S.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 15 (Spl.).—The pay status of county agricultural agents will shift three months from now, and county courts will not be required after that time to allot any part of county tax money for the agricultural specialists, according to present information here. The State and Federal governments are to pay the whole salary of each agent. Hitherto, the county has contributed a share, along with the State and Federal governments.

Under a bill lately passed by both Houses of the Legislature and which was not vetoed by Gov. Kump on March 10, thereby becoming effective as a law, the Legislature must appropriate for, and the State must pay, the county agents' salaries, in conjunction with the Federal Government.

The new law does away with the "mandatory" clause of the older law, under which county courts were forced to employ a county agent when 150 bona fide farmer residents of the county so petitioned. Under the new law, the 150 farmers may still petition the county court, but it apparently does not mean anything, as the county court does not pay any of the salary.

Local farm leaders regard this arrangement as generally satisfactory, provided the Legislature makes the necessary appropriations to match the Federal funds, which are allowed contingent upon being matched from sources within the State.

Approximately $65,000 annually will be required from the Legislature to maintain the county agent service over West Virginia on its present basis.

Treating Insane Of State Changed

Weston Hospital Will Get All Patients First.

Charleston, W. Va., March 15 (Spl.).—A radical change in the method of handling insane patients of West Virginia will go into effect April 1, under new State orders.

Persons committed to asylums will be sent to the Weston State Hospital for observation and treatment. Those found incurable will be sent to the asylum at Spencer or at Huntington. The remainder will be kept at Weston for treatment.

The new system results from development of a medical center at the Weston Hospital in accordance with plans of H. G. Kump and State health authorities.

Children's Home To Ask $65,000

Richmond, March 15 (Spl.).—Care of nearly 1,000 children by the Children's Home Society of Virginia will be discussed by Frank D. Preston, general secretary of the society, at the annual luncheon meeting Wednesday at St. Paul's Church.

Plans for raising $65,000 for the work of the society in the April campaign will be outlined and officers and directors elected. Edmund Strudwick, jr., president, will conduct the meeting.

W. A. Roper, vice president of the Bank of Commerce & Trusts in Richmond, will report on the financial condition of the society.

Wheat Adjustment Plan Fails in Spotsylvania

Spotsylvania Courthouse, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—Only 181 Spotsylvania County farmers signed up for the wheat adjustment program, County Agent W. R. Linthicum announces. Two hundred and fifty signatures were sought. He invites farmers to come to his office to get application blanks during a reopening period. No campaign will be conducted to enroll farmers, he said.

Kump's Bill On Revenue Gets Support

Fight to Kill Measure in W. Va. Senate Is Failure.

Charleston, W. Va., March 15 (Spl.).—By a vote of 47 to 39 the House of Delegates today defeated a move to kill the Senate version of Gov. H. G. Kump's emergency revenue bill. The amended measure was sent to a conference.

The plan to kill the bill was led by Delegate Rush D. Holt (Democrat), Lewis, who offered a motion to table it for the purpose of bringing out a new revenue program. In a hot two-hour floor fight Holt charged that the Senate "sold out the people in order to protect the utilities." The argument prevailed, however, that a conference between the two branches promised a speedier solution of the deadlock than making an entirely new start.

The Senate seeks a 3 per cent consumers' sales tax without exemptions and a 20 per cent increase of taxes on utilities and other corporations. The House is holding out for a 2 per cent sales tax, an increase of 60 per cent on corporations and 20 per cent luxury tax.

Final legislative action was taken by the Senate in passing a bill restoring teachers' salaries, effective June 1, from the cut of 10 to 15 per cent made in their minimum salaries when the county unit plan was adopted last year.

The Senate passed and sent to the House a bill repealing the privilege tax of 1½ per cent upon railroad car corporations and express companies. Senator A. B. Abbott (Democrat), Fayette, said the reason for the act was that the companies concerned were routing shipments around West Virginia to avoid the tax.

The Senate also passed a bill directing the State Road Commission to send to county assessors registration lists of automobiles for use in the assessment of property taxes.

Final action was taken on a bill authorizing county courts to name special commissioners of accounts when needed. The Ohio County court was authorized in another bill passed by the Senate to make a levy of 3 cents for support of the Wheeling public library.

Women's Clubs Meet March 26

Frederick Federation to Present Tableaux of Tercentenary.

Frederick, Md., March 15 (Spl.).—Directors yesterday planned for the annual meeting of the Frederick County Federation of Rural Women's Clubs, comprising 26 organizations with 670 members, at the State armory March 26. Mrs. Thomas P. Culler, Ballenger, president, presided, and Mrs. H. C. Erdman, Merryland Tract, was appointed chairman of the auditing committee.

The morning session will include reports by district presidents, directors, project committees and by Miss Helen Pearson, home demonstration agent. The afternoon will be given over to tableaux depicting incidents of the State's history since 1634. Mrs. Elmer Dixon is chairman of the program committee.

A meeting will be held next month to consider formation of a garden club, not limited to the federation membership, but to include all clubwomen. An all-day outing at Braddock Heights this summer is planned.

Two one-day coat-making schools are being considered under direction of Miss Helen Shelby, specialist of the University of Maryland. The final training school of the winter series will be held at Adamstown March 26.

A new series of schools was announced as follows: Middletown, April 3; Merryland Tract, April 4; Frederick, April 9; New Market, April 17; Adamstown, April 21.

Bristol Postmastership List Narrows to Three

Bristol, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—The list of candidates for the Bristol postmastership has been narrowed to three men, it was learned yesterday when representatives of the Postoffice Department came to the city to begin investigation of the applicants before recommending an appointment.

Holland McDowell, H. H. Adair and James Cash are the three eligible. Dr. Adair is acting postmaster, having succeeded Fred Millard, Republican, resigned.

Laborer Wins Wage Suit Against Town

Waynesboro, Pa., March 15 (Spl.).—A verdict in favor of Paul Jones, Franklin County laborer, was rendered by Magistrate Shirley Zarger, of Stoufferstown, in a suit against the Metal township supervisors for $21 in wages.

The verdict awarded Jones $7.20 and costs.

Martinsburg Is Considering Community Water-Softener

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 15 (Spl.). — A community water-softener, estimated to save many times its cost yearly in burned-out furnace pipes that clog with limestone, in other unclogged water pipes and in reduced soap bills, was proposed to the Chamber of Commerce yesterday by Paul Maurer, local chemical engineer.

A considerable inducement to industries to locate here would be soft city water, while to housewives the freedom from the hard limestone water would be a real boon, he said. Thyroid trouble (goiter) is an accompaniment of hard water in this region, doctors have found, and city water in its present form is not suited for babies' use.

The proposal interested the chamber directors and President Trammell Hollis named a committee to work with Maurer on costs of such a plant for here, and at the same time to work with Federal agencies on a city planning commission.

The committee as named is: Harry C. Hammann, William N. Dunn, J. Roy Nadenbousch, J. C. McKown, Mayor Chris Dailey, Aubrey McDaniel, and L. A. Roberts.

Enterprise Council, here, will be host.

P.-T. A. Presses School Request At Bladensburg

Will Appeal to Ritchie for Full 4-Year Term Following Refusal.

The Bladensburg (Md.) Parent-Teacher Association has launched further efforts for a four-year course at the Bladensburg Junior High School, following rejection of its recent petition by the Prince Georges County Board of Education.

A committee has been named to present the case to Dr. Albert S. Cook, State superintendent of education. It comprises W. R. Beattie, chairman; Robert W. McCullough, Mrs. F. I. Batch, P. J. Newmaker and Louis A. Day.

An appeal will be made to Gov. Ritchie should this move fail, and should he be unable to act, the matter will be carried to the next State Legislature.

The associatoion voted to hold open the office of president until fall out of respect to the memory of N. O. Brigham, former president, who died recently. Mrs. R. I. Bickford, vice president, will preside over meetings. A committee was named, with Robert Wilson, principal of the Bladensburg High School, as chairman, to draft a resolution of regret upon Mr. Brigham's death.

A card party will be held March 23 at the firehouse, with Mrs. D. H. Tucker in charge of arrangements.

Congress Fight In 9th District Set Tomorrow

Bristol, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—Prospect that the Ninth District Congressional nominating convention here Saturday will be one of the liveliest in the party's history continued yesterday as supporters of former State Senator Robert P. Bruce, of Wise County, opened headquarters here. Bruce opposes Representative John W. Flannagan, jr., of Bristol.

M. M. Heuser, chairman of the Wise County Democratic committee, in charge of the Bruce headquarters at Hotel Bristol, said, "We believe there is a splendid chance for his nomination."

Other developments during the day were:

Announcement by the Flannagan forces that N. Clarence Smith, former Tazewell County Commonwealth's Attorney, is their choice for temporary chairman of the convention.

Meanwhile, C. W. Boyd, another leading Tazewell County Democrat, declared that almost the entire Tazewell delegation would support Bruce.

Mr. Heuser, reviewing the Bruce strength, declared today that "before the convention opens we will have enough to nominate our man." He said the only delegates pledged to Flannagan are from Buchanan, Washington, and Lee Counties, and the City of Bristol. He claimed Bruce would have 156 delegates from two counties alone, Wise and Tazewell, and that this almost approximates the total of 167 pledged for the incumbent Representative. Only a majority is required for nomination.

Indications today were that Senator Harry F. Byrd would not be able to attend the convention.

Auditor's Report To Be Examined

Spotsylvania Courthouse, Va., March 15 (Spl).—C. O'Conor Goolrick, special commissioner of the Circuit Court of Spotsylvania County, has been engaged to examine the audit of the books of Irvin C. Clore, Spotsylvania County treasurer, made last year by T. Coleman Andrews, then State auditor, in which Clore was reported $3,700 short in his accounts.

Commonwealth's Attorney E. R. Carner hats filed suit to enforce collection from Clore of the alleged shortage. Clore asserts that he properly acquitted all public funds disbursed by him.

J. A. Winn Given Change of Venue

Former Danville Pastor to Be Tried May 7.

Danville, Va., March 15 (Spl.). The fourth trial of J. Arthur Winn, former pastor of Moseley Memorial Southern Methodist Church, charged with simple assault on Mrs. E. Hailey, a former neighbor, was today removed to another jurisdiction by Judge H. C. Leigh, of corporation court.

M. K. Harris, appearing for the defense, told the court in asking for a change of venue that he believed it impossible for final jury decision to be secured here owing to the prominence of the case.

Judge Leigh then moved the case to Charlotte County Circuit Court, where it will come up May 7.

A. H. Wallace, 74, Dies in Virginia

Fredericksburg Man Long Active in Business.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—A. Hansford Wallace, 74, retired business man, died yesterday at his residence.

Mr. Wallace came here 35 years ago to engage in the dry goods business. Later he entered the insurance business. He was vice president of the Fredericksburg National Bank, and was for many years a vestryman of St. George's Episcopal Church.

Surviving are the widow, Mrs Lula Braxton Wallace, and two brothers, Samuel G. Wallace and John Wallace, and one sister, Mrs. R. H L. Chichester, of Stafford County.

Funeral Set Today For Loudoun Girl

Miss Hilda Birdsall Died in Capital Hospital.

Purcellville, Va., March 15 (Spl.). Funeral services for Miss Hilda Birdsall, 22, daughter of Millard E. Birdsall, prominent Loudoun County dairyman, will be held from the Bethany Methodist Church here tomorrow.

Miss Birdsall, a native of this county, who had been a stenographer at Gallinger Hospital, Washington, died at that institution yesterday from pneumonia.

She attended school at Blackstone, Va., and Washington. Her father is the only survivor. Burial will be in the Hillboro Cemetery.

Mrs. Whitmore's Rites Are Held at Woodstock

Woodstock, Va., March 15 (Spl.). Mrs. Elizabeth Lichliter Whitmore, of Lancaster, Pa., was buried today in Massanutten Cemetery here.

Mrs. Whitmore, widow of the Rev. George A. Whitmore, pastor of Woodstock and Mount Jackson churches, was a native of here. Surviving are one daughter, Miss Ethel Whitmore, of Lancaster; a son, the Rev. George Whitmore, of Irvington, N. J., and a brother, Jacob Lichliter, of Lancaster.

Max Krol, Sentenced to Prison, Facing 3 More Indictments

Convicted Firm Treasurer in Winchester Jail Pending Appeal.

Winchester, Va., March 15 (Spl.). Three additional indictments against Max Krol, recently convicted of embezzling $4,000 of the now defunct Arthur G. Jones Woolen Co. here, and sentenced to six years, will be called for trial at the opening day of the next term of Corporation Court here, March 27.

The other indictments charge Krol with diverting company funds between 1925 and 1929, when he was its treasurer.

His attorneys now are preparing an appeal to the State Court of Appeals. Judge Philip Williams, of Corporation Court, granted a 60-day stay of judgment pending the appeal.

Krol has not applied for release on the $10,000 bail designated, and is being held in the local jail.

MAX KROL.

Work to Start On Dormitory Project Soon

Roanoke Firm Bids Low on Fredericksburg College Plans.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—Construction of new dormitories at Fredericksburg State Teachers College, under a PWA allotment of $360,000, is expected to begin in ten days, Dr. Morgan L. Combs, president, announced yesterday.

J. F. Barbour & Sons, of Roanoke, submitted the low bid of $236,745. One hundred and fifty-seven men will be given employment on the buildings, which are to be completed by December 1.

Bridge Work to Start.

Roanoke, Va., March 15 (Spl.). PWA construction of a bridge across the Roanoke River here is expected to begin shortly. M. S. Hudgins has been awarded the contract on a bid of approximately $39,700, City Manager W. P. Hunter said.

The bridge will be on the new entrance of Federal highway 311, which was rerouted to avoid numerous curves and a steep hill. It also is expected to relieve congested traffic.

Club Hears NRA Benefit Foretold

Fredericksburg Kiwanis Club Hears S. M. Janney.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 15 (Spl.). — "Permanent good will emerge from present chaos when the NRA finally becomes effective," S. M. Janney, of the firm of Janney-Marshall, Inc., chairman of the Grocers' Code Authority for Virginia, declared before the Kiwanis Club last night.

He praised President Roosevelt for "his decisive action in a time needing drastic steps," and styled him "the most human man I know of today."

At a ladies' night, March 27, Lieut. Gov. Irving Diener, of Alexandria, will pay the club an official visit.

Dr. L. P. Smith, Jr., Takes W. & L. Post

Will Be Head of Romance Language School.

Lexington, Va., March 15 (Spl.) Dr. Leon P. Smith, jr., of the University of Chicago, has acepted appointment as professor of romance languages at Washington and Lee University, President Gaines announced today.

Effective with the 1934-5 session, Dr. Smith's appointment includes the post of the romance language department head, left vacant by the death last summer of Dr. De La Warr Benjamin Easter.

Dr. Smith took his A. B. degree from Emory University and worked for eight years in the field of secondary education in Georgia, his native State. He is the son of Dean Leon Perdue Smith, of Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga.

Winchester Cuts Tax Rate 5 Cents

City Has 1933 Surplus of $42,143.

Winchester, Va., March 15 (Spl.). A reduction of 5 cents per $100 in the Winchester tax rate was ordered by Common Council when it adopted a budget of $241,000 for 1934.

The tax rate of $1.30 per $100 for 1934 represents a reduction of 25 cents from the 1932 rate. The reduction was made possible, councilmen said, by the improved financial condition of the city. At the end of 1933, an audit showed a surplus of $42,143.84, while assets increased $8,290.23 and liabilities decreased $35,853.61 last year.

In 1932 the collection rate was 73.9 per cent, while in 1933 it was 76.8 per cent. Delinquencies in water tax payments increased $7,000 during 1933, to approximately $12,272.85.

$150,000 PWA Loan For Grafton Unlikely

Grafton, W. Va., March 15 (Spl.). Probabilities are that Grafton will not get its $150,000 hospital, a PWA loan for which was sought under the 30-70 plan and has been pending since October.

Mayor Charles O. King, who just returned from Washington, where he conferred on the loan, said the outlook is not very promising.

Jefferson Elected County Chairman

Culpeper Red Cross Votes $75 to Fuel Fund.

Culpeper, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—W. W. Jefferson, of the Culpeper High School faculty, was chosen Culpeper County Red Cross chairman, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Lewis P. Nelson, jr. Others elected were the Rev. W. Francis Allison, vice chairman, and E. J. Nottingham, jr., treasurer.

Mrs. Alfred S. Brand will continue as roll call chairman and Mrs. George Hoffman as clothing distributor.

The organization voted to give $75 for fuel for needy persons, to be distributed from the office of D. J. Coleman.

Hungry Eating Trapped Foxes In Page County

Families Found Starving by Welfare Workers in Needy Survey.

Luray, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—Misses Jeanette Walton and Dorothy Smith, wro are making a canvass of needy families in Page County, have 268 applications calling for immediate relief.

Relief, which will be derived from $1,000 allotted by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, will be in the form of pork, butter, flour, clothing, &c. The relief is being administered by the county supervisors.

Already 16,000 pounds of pork, 6,000 pounds of butter and large quantities of flour and clothing have been received for distribution from Luray. Misses Walton and Smith also have asked for a ton of salt pork and half a ton of butter for distribution from Shenandoah. Stanley, another town, will receive 1,000 pounds of pork and 600 pounds of butter.

Some families were found near the starvation point. One family of six in the Blue Ridge had only a half box of oatmeal and several trapped muskrats as food. Foxes are being trapped in some parts of the county for food.

The $1,500 is half exhausted, and other requisitions will be made.

Dentists Set Rates.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—Rates of $1.50 per operation and $2 per home visit for services to persons eligible for aid from the Federal Emergency Relief Administration were set by dentists of this region in conference with Miss Nell Johnson, FERA director, and her assistant, Mrs. Alice Loehr Bailey

An advisory committee includes Dr. Duval Hicks, Dr. Fielding L. Wilson, Dr. Andrew J. Bolling, Dr. J. E. Walters, Dr. R. N. Lanier and Dr. J. Garnett King.

Staunton Surveys Cases.

Staunton, Va., March 1 (Spl.).—The city council has named Councilmen William A. Grubert and Charles K. Brown to survey the most needy cases here and decide how far the city can go in relief work.

Heavy laying off of CWA employes has placed an added burden on the welfare league and other agencies, all of which have nearly exhausted their funds. Miss Elizabeth Brooke, county superintendent of public welfare, said the situation is acute.

Rockbridge Allots $400.

Lexington, Va, March 15 (Spl.).—The Rockbridge County Supervisors have appropriated $200 for a sewing room and clothing department and another $200 for the Children's Home Society of Richmond.

Grange Studies 1934 Program For Virginia

Leaders Continue Talks in Third Day of Session Today.

Blacksburg, Va., March 15 (Spl.). Business sessions of the annual lecturers' conference of the Virginia State Grange were opened today with an address by James C. Farmer, of South Newbury, N. H., James H. Rogers spoke on "Our 1934 Program of Work," and Maude E. Wallace on "Grange Women and Their Homes." Dr. William E. Garnett discussed "Rural Life Today." Mr. Farmer spoke again in the afternoon on the individual problems of lecturers.

Exemplification of the installation ceremony was conducted last night, followed by a round-table conference on degree work. Dr. Meade Ferguson, of Richmond, master of the Virginia State Grange, presided at a meeting of deputies.

The annual conference was opened yesterday by Dr. J. A. Burruss, president of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, who welcomed visiting grange leaders. Among the outstanding visitors participating in the meetings are Mr. Farmer, lecturer of the National Grange; Dr. Ferguson, Dr. H. W. McLaughlin, Richmond, minister and rural church specialist; Mark Turner, Vienna, chairman of the State Grange executive committee; W. G. Wyser, Richmond, general manager of the Southern States Cooperative; Dr. H. A. Morgan, Knoxville, Tenn., director of the Tennessee Valley Authority, and Alfred O. Hill, Petersburg, grange deputy and farm editor.

The program tomorrow will include addresses by Mr. Farmer on "The National Grange Program," by Mr. Hill on "Getting the Grange Into Newspaper Headlines," by Mr. Rogers on "The State Grange Program," by Mr. Wyser on "Cooperation and Grange Cooperatives," by Dr. Morgan on "The Tennessee Valley Authority in Relation to Virginia," and Dr. Gee on "The Grange and Your Community."

Antietam Battlefield Relics Being Collected in Museum

Gen. Jackson's Map Among Objects Exhibited in Stone Lodge.

Hagerstown, Md., March 15 (Spl.). A museum where are kept rare relics of the Battle of Antietam has been established in a stone lodge on the battlefield, Superintendent John Kyd Beckenbaugh announces. Many people have given or loaned relics for the exhibition.

Among the most valuable exhibits is a map of Virginia and Maryland, showing the roads, streams and other military data which was given to Gen. Henry Kyd Douglas, an uncle of the present battlefield superintendent, by Gen. "Stonewall" Jackson prior to the Battle of Antietam. Some pencil marks made by Gen. Jackson can be seen on the map. Following the battle, Gen. Jackson left the map with Douglas, who was on his staff.

Adjutants general of each State which had troops participating in the battle have been asked to supply information and experiences concerning survivors of the battle.

Schools have been invited to send classes to the battlefield.

Smith Opens Maryland Gubernatorial Campaign

Hagerstown, Md., March 15 (Spl.). H. Webster Smith, Baltimore, aspiring to the Republican nomination for Governor, formally opened his campaign here last night before the Young Men's Republican Club of Washington County.

He made the first speech of his campaign, J. Kemp Bartlett, jr., Baltimore attorney, accompanied him here.

Norfolk Pastor Will Take Post In Winchester

Rev. E.B. McGukin Accepts Call to Succeed Late Dr. F. T. McFaden.

Winchester, Va., March 15 (Spl.). The Rev. E. B. McGukin, pastor of LaFayette Presbyterian Church at Norfolk, today accepted the call to Loudoun Street Presbyterian Church here, and will begin his pastorate the first Sunday in April.

He is regarded as one of the outstanding young Presbyterian ministers in Virginia. Regrets were voiced at Norfolk last evening when he resigned there.

He was called to the church here shortly after the first of the year. He preached in the local church February 18 and announced he would decide soon.

The Rev. Mr. McGukin went to LaFayette Church in May, 1929, immediately after graduation from the Union Theological Seminary, Richmond. A native of Georgia, he graduated from Davidson College before taking up theological work.

Since he went to Norfolk the church has gained many members. He took a leading part in young people's activities, including the conferences at Virginia Beach and Jamestown Island.

Here he will succeed the Rev. Dr. Frank T. McFaden, who died last summer after ten years' service here.

Stewart Bell, John S. Scully, jr., and J. Henry Moling, jr., constitute the church's pulpit committee.

Mrs. Roosevelt Invited To Mothers' Day Rites

Fredericksburg, Va., March 19 (Spl.).—Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, mother of the President, has been invited to attend the Mothers' Day exercises at the home and the grave of the mother of George Washington here May 13.

Gov. Peery of Virginia yesterday added his official invitation to that of the City of Fredericksburg and the Fredericksburg branch of the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities.

Dr. Phillip Mills, Optican, Dies at 63

Louisa Resident Formerly Lived in Lexington.

Charlottesville, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—Dr. Phillip C. Mills, 63, Optician and pharmacist at Mineral, Louisa County, for the past eleven years, who died yesterday at the Blue Ridge Sanatorium, near here, will be buried at Mineral tomorrow.

He was graduated at Allegheny (Pa.) College and the Optical College at Philadelphia. He located first at Lexington and later opened an office in Richmond.

Unpaid License Taxes Ordered To Grand Jury

Fredericksburg Council Will Fix Levies on Wine Sales.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—A list of city license tax delinquents will be referred for grand jury action April 1, it was decided by city council last night. Firms which have not paid their licenses are subject to a fine of $20 per day, it was reported.

The Sanitary Grocery Co. has filed suit in the United States District Court at Richmond to test the validity of the $500 assessment. A hearing is set for May 3.

Leon W. McWane, of the State highway department, was installed as council clerk, succeeding Horton Van Denburg, who resigned for duty in the United States Army with the CCC.

The council decided to hold a special meeting to fix license taxes for the sale of wine and beer exceeding 3.2 per cent alcoholic strength.

The ordinance committee was instructed to draft a measure defining certain buildings as "nusiances and fire hazards" and prescribing methods of abating them.

A letter from H. G. Shirley, State highway commissioner, declared that heavy curtailment in highway funds almost eliminate possibility of a walk-way on the Free Bridge crossing the Rappahannock between Fredericksburg and Stafford County.

V. P. I. Summer Courses Listed

Two 6-Week Terms and Several Conferences Are Arranged.

Blacksburg, Va., March 15 (Spl.). Eleven conferences and summer school terms at the Virginia Polytechnic Institute have been arranged under direction of Dr. J. W. Watson.

Two terms of six weeks each will be offered, beginning June 14 and July 20. Agricultural high school students and the Virginia Chapter of the Future Farmers of America will conduct a rally June 18. Instructors of vocational agriculture will convene July 2.

Special courses throughout the summer will be the rural ministers' short course and the 4-H Club leaders' course. The Institute of Rural Affairs and the State Farmers' Institute will take place July 31.

Two Masonic schools are scheduled. The Southwestern Royal Arch Masons' School and the Southwestern Blue Lodge Masonic School will be held July 23 and August 6.

Chemical Election Protests Offered

Court of Appeals Hears New Phase of Suit.

Richmond, March 15 (AP).—When the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals hands down its decision in the case of the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co., which it heard argued yesterday, it will rule on a point of interest to most financial organizations in Virginia.

The question is whether stock in a corporation which has been bought in by the company is still outstanding. The chemical company suits contest the validity of an election of directors made by prior preference stockholders. It was claimed the election was illegal because stock outstanding had been bought in by the company in violation of an agreement.

The supreme court also granted an appeal to D. R. Waddell and Josie Waddell from a decree of the Roanoke Hustings Court. The lower court held that they were liable to the Roanoke Building & Loan Association by reason of an alleged assumption of a debt owed the association by J. M. Robinson.

On Dying Young.

Death never appears more tragic than when it strikes down one who, in the exuberance of youth, is rapidly winning signal honors and achievement. Where the career of a Lycidas ends the imagination may easily carry him on to transcendent prowess, whether in athletics, scholarship or some unique skill. So it must appear to the many friends of Robert Henry Michelet, young Washingtonian who had won a reputation as Dartmouth's foremost undergraduate.

Young Michelet had been president of his class for three years. He was the guiding influence in numerous scholastic and fraternal groups. In football and track he had won a national reputation, and he had recently been chosen a Rhodes scholar. To die amid such triumphs seems particularly cruel, yet the tragedy of death in the heydey of success is not without its compensation.

All life is ephemeral. We too often ascribe unreal advantages to being "the last leaf on the tree." May it not be ultimately more satisfying, even to those deprived, to have a career snapped off "before its echoes fade?" As Housman says:

> Smart lad, to slip betimes away
> From fields where glory does not stay,
> And early though the laurel grows
> It withers quicker than the rose.

Two Separate Issues.

When the House on Thursday ceased battering the independent offices appropriation bill and sent it to conference, the Federal employes pay cut issue appeared to be virtually settled. But the entangled controversy over veterans' benefits was even more acutely snarled up.

The House did not go quite so far as the Senate toward debauching the Administration's economy act of a year ago. Both chambers, however, have favored restoration of the fatal procedure of rewarding those groups which are most insistent in their demands. It now appears that the principle of making pensions depend upon service-connected disabilities can not be preserved by any method less drastic than a Presidential veto.

Curtailment of Federal salaries and elimination of unjustifiable veterans' benefits were thrown together in last year's economy act. The union ceased to be logical as soon as the move to abandon these very different economies gained headway. The combination of the two issues is now detrimental to Federal employes, who are clearly entitled to at least partial restoration of their base pay.

Reduction of Federal salaries was asked as a temporary sacrifice; pension adjustments were intended permanently to eliminate indefensible raids on the Treasury. The Administration's drive for higher wages in private industry today implies an obligation to restore Federal salaries. But the move to reinstate unwarranted handouts to one class of organized beneficiaries can not be considered a part of the recovery policy or any other constructive program.

No doubt the Senate will accept the House plan of terminating one-third of the pay cut as of February 1 and another one-third on July 1. Indications are that this arrangement is also satisfactory to the President. The question of salaries has played only a minor part in the entire squabble over economy. It might well be completely eliminated by acceptance of the compromise, so that the menace of a revived pensions racket can be faced without further confusion of the principles involved.

A veto by President Hoover paved the way for the Roosevelt economy act. The former President sent back to Congress the independent offices appropriation bill for 1934 because that body had refused to approve the pension adjustments he considered essential to maintenance of the National credit. In resubmitting this bill to the special session last March, President Roosevelt incorporated his courageous economy provisions. Another veto for the same purpose, if the pay cut problem were segregated, would help to bring Congress to a sense of its responsibility.

Stamping It Out.

Two more kidnapers have been swept into prison for life by the properly remorseless campaign against that type of criminal. The results of some 20 kidnapings during the last two years is encouraging. In most cases the abductors, or at least some of them, have been convicted and sentenced to long terms in prison. Three kidnapers have been sentenced to death. Two have been lynched and at least one has committed suicide. Other conspirators are paying extreme penalties without ever having carried out their abduction plans, to say nothing of collecting ransom.

With alert Federal assistance, the States are tracking down kidnapers with remarkable success. Chances of escape with the spoils of this racket are extremely slim. Even the desperadoes who engage in this particularly loathsome crime seem to be recognizing that the dice are weighted heavily against them.

The Labor Problem.

The provisions of the Wagner bill, which would ban company unions and establish a permanent National Labor Board with large powers to enforce its decisions, threaten to precipitate a conflict in which the fundamental issues involved may easily be lost to sight.

The bill is indorsed enthusiastically by those labor leaders who believe that it will assist unionization under the A. F. of L. On the other hand it is being bitterly fought by those employing groups who are not prepared to indorse the principle of independent labor unionization. The clamor raised by extremists on both sides threatens to drown out the voices of those who would seek solution from a dispassionate survey of the direction in which our industrial organization is headed.

When the industrial recovery act encouraged agreements among industrial competitors—regulating trade practices, prices and production—collective bargaining by employes was similarly given indorsement by the State. The type of economic cooperation stimulated by the New Deal legislation could not properly deny to labor the advantages of independent organization which are conceded to capital. It is less generally understood, however, that industrial organization under governmental supervision definitely entails new methods of labor organization, and labor policies which accept responsibility along with power.

The restricted outlook of the older type of craft unionism, still dominant within the A. F. of L., does not merely cut across industrial lines. It also gives rise to costly jurisdictional disputes, and often introduces discord into establishments with excellent labor relations. Unions of this sort, even though free and independent of employer dictation, are not well designed to deal with employers within a particular industry. The union set upon driving a good bargain for workers of the same occupational group, sometimes at the expense of other employes, or the employing industry as a whole, may retard rather than further the purposes of the recovery act. It can not be assumed as a matter of course that such trade unionism fits into a planned economy which must reduce friction between labor and capital, or fail at the outset.

Of course this does not mean that employers who refuse to recognize representative labor organizations, in order to set up subservient unions under company domination, are furthering the recovery process. On the contrary, they are relying upon the Government to assure them the benefits of industrial cooperation, while they try to deny workers similar rights of association. Such tactics can only result in focussing the attention of organized labor on its grievances instead of on its shortcomings.

Employers, employes and the Government are at present engaged in a joint enterprise to eliminate industrial conflict, improve employment conditions, and regulate competitive practices. A sound, sane, and forward-looking labor policy is fundamental to the success of this program. It will not be forthcoming if reliance is placed either upon coercive laws or upon coercive action by either capital or labor. A new type of national economy demands a new technique for the maintenance of industrial peace. Neither the Government, management nor labor can solve the problem by arbitrary fiat.

A Reassuring Admission.

From time to time there have been rumors that the Administration might issue non-interest bearing notes of small denominations under the Thomas amendment to the agricultural adjustment act. Fortunately President Roosevelt has decisively set at rest fears that monetary inflation of this sort is in the offing. He has admitted that the issuance of these notes would constitute a dangerous precedent encouraging further raids on the Treasury.

As the President approved the agricultural relief measure with amendments attached, he is naturally not prepared to admit that there is no difference at all between notes of the Thomas variety and straight greenback issues. Consequently, he emphasizes the fact that the first type of note could be issued only to retire or replace outstanding Federal obligations. This theoretical distinction, even if valid, is unimportant. The major danger in printing paper money comes, as the President says, from the temptation to repeat the performance. The original issues may be limited in amount, as in the case of the non-interest bearing notes. They may be restricted to certain defined purposes. But whether used to replace outstanding debt obligations, or to pay bonuses to veterans, the disastrous printing-press habit is formed by such devices.

Fiat money represents a forced loan obtained by the issuing government without payment of interest. The notes authorized by section 43 of the agricultural adjustment act possess these essential characteristics of fiat money. It is, therefore, reassuring to know that the President is opposed to this method of borrowing by inflating the currency, demonstrably fatal wherever and whenever it has been tried.

Accepting Nature's Ways.

Nature's lavishness and man's inventive genius have conspired together in recent years to create a profit-destroying abundance. Plenty has become a synonym for misfortune and reproductive processes have ceased to be viewed with tolerance by those who have to sell their wares in glutted markets. So it is somewhat surprising to hear that the fishermen of the Chesapeake Bay region are rejoicing in the invasion of the rivers by shad on their way to the spawning grounds. Instead of parceling out quotas and plotting to prevent the fish from depositing their eggs, these benighted fishermen intend to catch as many as possible, and permit the productive cycle to continue.

There is something strange about this complacent acceptance of nature's ways and this linking of profits with plenty. Perhaps the clue to the mystery lies there. The amount of this superexcellent fish that can be placed on the market at any one time is limited. The fishermen are thinking in terms of scarcity after all, when they express a hope that prices will hold long enough to enable them to sell at a profit.

The Uncorrected Blunder.

The Administration would conserve both dignity and self-respect if it would realize that a mistaken policy can not be smoothed over either by condemnation or blandishment of those who disagree on matters of principle. With extraordinary ineptness both methods have been tried in the case of Col. Lindbergh. The natural result has been a stinging retort, requiring reiteration before Secretary Dern could be made to understand that the country's most distinguished aviator means what he says.

Of course it is never pleasant to admit a major error of policy. But when such errors are made, an acid test of moral and intellectual stature is willingness to assume responsibility and to retract, both in words and deeds. To refuse to do so is to exhibit that stubbornness which is the enemy, not the aid, of leadership. And in the case of an Administration which has freely admitted the experimental character of its policy, refusal to turn back from a false trail is the more surprising.

It needs only the disastrous and chaotic results to date to show that the present air-mail policy is leading nowhere. Indeed each new attempt at justification seems more distasteful than the last. Yesterday Maj. Gen. Foulois asserted that the costs to date are outweighed by the effectiveness of the training afforded Army flyers. The intimation that this important commercial service should be regarded in the same light as an R. O. T. C. is scarcely encouraging. By the same token the railroads might be turned over to the Army Engineer Corps. Perhaps schedules would be somewhat disorganized, but we would have what Gen. Foulois is quoted as calling "an ideal peacetime test" of military training.

"I believe," says Col. Lindbergh, "that the use of the Army Air Corps to carry the air mail was unwarranted and contrary to American principle."

That may not be the last word on the subject. But why not is still to be demonstrated.

A Doubtful Cure.

Every honest taxpayer will sympathize with Secretary Morgenthau's desire to uproot the "influence racket" in the collection of revenue. For several years it has been apparent that the Federal system of collecting taxes, as well as the income tax law, is in need of overhauling. But the method by which the Administration hopes to curtail tax evasion arouses grave misgivings.

It is a criminal offense to file an erroneous tax return with intent to defraud the Government. Heretofore decision as to whether taxpayers should be prosecuted under this statute has been left to officials in the Bureau of Internal Revenue. The present plan is to transfer that responsibility to Federal grand juries. It is reported that cases involving small as well as large sums will be submitted to grand juries when the taxpayer's motive in filing an alleged incorrect return is open to question.

How far this policy will be carried remains to be seen. In 1931 more than 108,000 returns were found to be incorrect in some particular. Will all cases of this kind be scrutinized by grand juries for evidence of intent to defraud the Government? Even if cases which the Bureau of Internal Revenue considers doubtful—amounting to nearly 18,000 in 1931—should be referred to grand juries, the danger of cluttering court dockets with petty disputes would be great. Having just rescued the courts from the stultifying avalanche of prohibition cases, it is strange that the Administration should impose upon them a new burden of this kind.

Moreover, it is difficult to see what advantage is to be gained by transferring discretion in such matters from experts of the Treasury Department to untrained grand jury men who know little or nothing of the intricacies of tax law. Regarded from this angle, the new policy appears akin to an attempt on the part of Treasury officials to evade responsibility for administering the law. Secretary Morgenthau might achieve much better results by eliminating political influence from the appointment of officials in the Bureau of Internal Revenue, and by bringing all tax gatherers under civil service regulations.

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY.

THE SENATE proposed that the President be limited to one term. Senator Reed (Democrat), Missouri, ridiculed the theory that limiting the term of office would "lift the President into a fine atmosphere wherein the odor of politics would not be found."

GABRIELE D'ANNUNZIO, the soldier-poet, had the title of Prince of Montenevoso conferred upon him by King Victor Emmanuel in recognition of the notable service he rendered Italy during and after the war.

THE PRINCE OF WALES, only recently recovered from a fractured collar bone received in a fall from a horse, again met with an accident in a steeplechase and suffered a slight concussion.

The Virtue of Thrift.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is it not high time the Administration took cognizance of the fact that there is such a virtue as thrift? Apparently, it has never crossed the minds of those who are busy stirring the "alphabet soup" that many of these temporary kitchens would be unnecessary had multitudes practiced some old-fashioned economy when money came easy during those hectic days when dollars doubled daily on the stock exchange, and virtually the entire Nation was engaged in an orgy of speculation.

The prophet, Joseph, when he realized the inevitable approach of "lean" years did not exhort the king to attempt to legislate prosperity through vague, impractical methods. He rather chose to establish a sound, stable and sober state whereby thrift and economy were rigidly enforced. And, in so doing, the storm was weathered and the budget remained balanced. How times have changed! E. K. G.

Repudiation of Democracy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: However heartily the average American may indorse our President's professed urge toward economy, its harsh application to certain classes of citizens, while notably absent in the attitude toward others no more deserving or more in need, is a distinct repudiation of democracy in the New Deal.

For when National economy becomes so callously miserly as to compel men who have fought our battles overseas, are old and practically unable to work, and without any financial resources, to shamble into breadlines or pick their meals out of garbage cans; it is time for self-respecting, kindly Americans to sit up and emphatically protest—by letter, or later, at the ballot box!

Lopsided Economy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If, in its lopsided economic urge, the present Administration wishes to save another $450,000,000, it may do so on veterans' compensation. I have the solution. I offer my own case as a precedent for all new amendments and regulations on veterans' benefits.

I was among the first volunteer officers to reach France and was totally disabled in service.

At the present time I receive in compensation for a ruined life $41.25 a month, from which is deducted $34.80 for War Risk insurance premium, leaving me $6.45 a month net. That I am 100 per cent service disabled is fairly proven (though not allowed under the present regime) and on that basis I receive net 6.45 cents for each 1 per centum of disability. I suggest that if this rate of compensation be applied to me it could set a precedent for all compensation. Thus a 30 per cent disabled emergency officer who now draws $225 a month would get $1.93 and a totally disabled enlisted man would get $6.45 a month instead of $90, thus effecting a big saving all around.

Inequities to Veterans.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read your editorial "All Tied Up" in your March 2 issue. You are entirely wrong in your statement that it is simply a question whether or not Federal funds shall be used to appease well organized factions on the eve of an election.

The real truth behind the revolt and the activities on the part of veterans' organizations at this time is broken promises and inhuman and un-American treatment of service-connected disabled veterans. The President promised that no service-connected disabled veteran need worry, he would be justly dealt with; and that under his substitute amendment last June the maximum cut for service-connected disabled veterans would be 25 per cent and would show an average of 18 per cent. These promises have not been kept.

The President has signed and put into effect Veterans Regulation No. 3, which violates both of these promises and one of the most fundamental principles of this Government—to wit, equality under the law for all men regardless of former servitude. Under this regulation acknowledged service-connected disabled emergency officers are deranked, degraded and dishonored as former officers of the United States while thousands of regular officers are left on the rolls, with the same class of disability acquired in the same war, under identical circumstances, and to lesser extent. This thing is so unfair and un-American that it is revolting.

Queen Christina.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In issue of today you published, under heading "Falsifying History," the criticism of "A Reader" of your editorial speaking of Queen Christina as a Scandinavian Cleopatra who never had an Anthony.

Your critic quoted from "The Columbian Encyclopedia"—a secular publication. May I quote, in full, from the "New Students' Reference Work:"

"Christina, Queen of Sweden, the only child of the great Gustavus Adolphus, was born December 17, 1626. She succeeded her father when only 6 years old. Beautiful and brilliant, she was given the schooling then only given to men. She took the ruling power into her own hands in 1644, and six years later, in accordance with her mannish desires, was crowned king instead of queen. She ruled ably for the next four years, but her wayward restlessness could not brook longer the restraints on her personal action which her position of queen made her keep, and she resigned the throne in favor of her cousin Charles, reserving, however, authority over her own household. At this time, when only 28 years old, she traveled over Europe somewhat like a female knight-errant, now becoming very religious at Brussels, now entering Rome on horseback dressed as an Amazon, and later shocking Paris by having her grand equerry put to death in her own house for treason. Tired of this wandering life, she thought the death of Charles a good chance to become queen again. But in this she failed. She died at Rome, April 19, 1689."

From an "Old Maid."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In J. F. M.'s letter headed "Inequities of Social Life," he writes of "placing a bar of gold upon the palm of a spinster and a crown of thorns upon the brow of a mother."

On the face of it, it does look as though the "old maid" had decidedly the advantage. But, perhaps if you inquire, you will find that most of them are supporting an aged father or mother, some times both, or an invalid sister, or younger brothers and sisters, not able to take care of themselves, sometimes a combination of all of them.

Such help isn't confined to the "old maid" receiving $3,000 per year by any means. The vast majority receive very little more than half that amount, and many not even half, but have the same obligations.

Perhaps the "crown of thorns" is just as applicable to one as to the other, for many "old maids" have had to sacrifice their normal life's happiness to stay on the job, caring for the old, the too young, the invalids, while their brothers went gaily off to homes of their own with no thought as to how the ones left at home were to get along.

First Year Under New Deal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are millions of people in a condition or state they were not in 12 months ago, through the NRA, CWA, PWA and all the other administrations.

Did the A's help the average citizen? I will say not! On the opposite hand the office help, mostly women and boys, and, of course, some old-timers, too, get the best of the New Deal. My average salary for the past year has been $7.38 per week, in Washington, and I am reckoned skilled in my profession or business. Imagine having to take orders from a blacksmith, bricklayer or carpenter, and I don't know what, as foreman on CWA projects.

Can any one tell me how a man can support an aged mother and wife on the few dollars he has received during this first year of the New Deal, and pay his taxes? Or how can a married man with several children give them food, raiment and shelter, the three mainstays of life? A true American does not want charity or relief or any part of them.

Salvation Army Service.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In regard to statements of Sidney F. Taliaferro published in The Post, it seems he knows very little about the excellent service rendered by the Salvation Army. He should eat there as a transient and find out. Is he not aware of the fact that thousands of self-respecting citizens of the District of Columbia are being cared for as transients in other cities and towns? He does not say that each transient is willing and thankful to work 24 hours a week before he collects his 90 cents. Thanks to President Roosevelt and the Federal Emergency Relief for securing competent men that understand their business.

Noises of the Night.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Are there enough people interested in "the great fight" to justify making the night hideous for the rest of us by the raucous calls of "extras" by five or six boys and, to judge from their voices, after midnight?

What with the racket made by flapping loose links on the chains of automobiles, the increased noise of trolleys, the shrieking of fire engines, we surely have racket enough without this yelling of extras. Newspaper enterprise is no doubt laudable, but it can be carried to extremes.

As Others See It

Ignoring Dr. Haber.

Dr. Fritz Haber did Germany a tremendous service when, during the World War, he discovered the way to replenish her military nitrate through the catalytic process of fixing atmospheric nitrogen. Yet no Nazi newspaper is mentioning his death at Basel last Thursday and no other German newspaper is alluding to the fact that this great German scientist and benefactor of his fatherland was a Jew. It is difficult to see how humorless fanaticism could be carried further.

However, the Nazis are not the only ones who have ignored Dr. Haber. In this country Senator Norris of Nebraska has always ignored Dr. Haber and the fact that his invention made the Muscle Shoals nitrate plant obsolete before it was finished.

They Saw Them!

The Postoffice, Friday.

You can never tell by its start where a conversation is going to end. Talcott Williams used to say that people don't talk in paragraphs; the truth is, they don't talk in sequence.

The other evening four of us started talking taxes. We ended with history.

* * * *

Serge said he wanted one of us to help him make out his income-tax return. Hebber said he didn't know Serge had an income. We said that the hardest kind of returns to make out were the kind that Hebber implied Serge wanted to make out. Louis How kept silence.

"The French," Serge ventured, "are always kicking about taxes."

"No Frenchman," Hebber protested "ever pays any taxes: that is what is the matter with France."

"And that," Serge sought to explain, "is why all Frenchmen kick about their taxes."

"Did you ever know," asked Hebber, "that Lafayette once had a row over his Federal taxes wrongfully alleged to be in arrears?"

Then, when Louis How still said nothing, we said, no, but we once knew a man who had seen Lafayette. And Serge and Hebber uttered obrases uncomplimentary about us.

"Not at all," said we; "it isn't necessary to be old for that."

* * * *

Among our many schools, when we were very young indeed, there was one located at Lititz, in Lancaster County, Pa.—where they make real pretzels. Besides ourselves, several notorious and distinguished people attended that school: Harry Thaw for one term, before our time; before Thaw's time, James M. Beck. Mr. Beck's uncle conducted the school: a keen combination of scholar and teacher—A. R. Beck, who was an old man in our day, though never old in anything except years, and who died, in his nineties, a decade ago. He used to tell us:

"I saw Lafayette. You know, he came back to this country at least once after our Revolution."

* * * *

Mr. Beck was a man with heavy gray eyebrows and sharp blue-gray eyes. Remember the first pirate to appear in "Treasure Island?" A. R. Beck puffed like Billy Bones, though sharing no other characteristic with that terrible buccaneer.

* * * *

"I was," said he, "a little fellow here in Lititz, but Lafayette was a hero to every American, big or little, then. And my father made me happy when, one day, he announced:

"'Gen. Lafayette is to stop at Lancaster tomorrow. They are to give him a big luncheon, and afterward he will be at a reception in the theater. I'll take you to Lancaster.'

"Looking backward, I fancy that that American trip was far more dangerous to the Marquis' health than our Revolution had been. He had to eat municipal luncheons and state dinners at every city he visited many.

* * * *

"Well, we arrived at Lancaster in the afternoon. I don't know whether the original of what is now called the Fulton Opera House was built then, but the reception was held in some theater or other, and seven-eighths of the people who wanted to get inside couldn't. So my father and I had to stand in the street and yell with the other outsiders for Gen. Lafayette to show himself on the porch over the theater entrance.

"He did show himself there—and that's how I saw him.

"I admit I was a little disappointed. I was too young to know that few heroes look heroic. This one, as I recall him, was puny, almost insignificant, with ginger hair, a thin, pale face and freckles."

* * * *

And then we would always ask, all of us boys: "Was that all you noticed about him, Mr. Beck?"

And then Mr. Beck would blow like Billy Bones and answer:

"Well, no, it isn't. It's a matter of record that Gen. Lafayette was temperate by habit; but all these dinners and lunches must have been trying to him, and—in short, it seemed to my father and me that Gen. Lafayette was rather drunk."

* * * *

It was then that Louis How spoke:

"When I was a child, there visited my grandfather James Eads, an old Englishman who had been brought up over there in Plymouth."

This old Englishman told Louis the story that Louis told us.

* * * *

"I was a mere codger," said he, "when, one day, my father said: 'You must come down to the harbor at teatime with me. There is somebody there that I want you to see, for then you can always remember him.'

"So down I toddled and into a crowd of the townfolk, all gathered at the waterside and looking at a man-of-war lying close in. By and by the crowd cheered, and my father lifted me on his shoulder.

"I saw a stocky man on the ship's deck, with a cocked hat askew on his head and his head sunk forward, and his hands clasped behind his back. The crowd cheered again, that English crowd. But he never acknowledged their cheers, never looked 'round. He just went to the far rail and stood there looking the other way, looking cross-channel.

"Then, by and by, he took a spy-glass that a ship's officer offered him. He used it to look out into the channel.

"I asked: 'What's he looking for, father?'

"'He's trying to see the coast of France, although he knows he can't see it,' said my father. 'He's trying because he knows that soon he'll probably never have another chance even to try. That ship is under orders to take him to an island off the African Coast, where he is to be kept for the rest of his life. He is Napoleon Bonaparte.'"

BARGERON.

Good morning, ladies and gentlemen of the radio audience. This morning we present Mr. John Diekenkorper, the husband of Mrs. Diekenkorper who has appeared occasionally on this program. Mr. Diekenkorper brings to you a graphic description of America coming out of the depression. He has a ringside seat at the biggest show on earth, Mr. Diekenkorper:

Hellow there everybody; this is John Diekenkorper speaking to you from the amphitheater in the Nation's Capital. Old America is coming out of the depression—oh, boy, oh, boy, what a show! Events crowd in on me so fast, folks, that I am bewildered—there comes America again; come on America, oh, boy! oh, boy!

What's this now? Oh, yes, Mrs. Roosevelt leaves Puerto Rico with her entourage of newspaper girls—it was a boon for the islands, her visit, not her departure, says the genial Governor, Blanton Winship—oh, boy! oh, boy!

• • • •

On we go—NRA promises to sock Morgan, proletariat cheers, oh, boy! oh, boy!—Anna Dall's new book, "Bunny goes to the White House," or something like that, appears in Washington bookstores—oh, boy! oh, boy! come on America!

Hero Lindbergh turns down Administration's proffered hand, Secretary Dern extends it again, oh boy, oh boy—Mr. Roosevelt's new book, "On Our Way," said to be about ready for the press, oh boy, oh boy! Folks, it's breath-taking. Give me a glass of water, somebody, quick! NRA again promises to sock Morgan, proletariat cheers, oh boy, oh boy!

• • • •

Automobile manufacturers say they will increase wages and reduce hours if union is not forced on them, thus emphasizing importance of union, oh boy, oh boy! Henry Ford issues another one of his statements, slyly twitting the President, and he is so subtle that it is doubtful if Mr. Roosevelt himself knows he is being kidded, oh boy, oh boy!

Henry says bankers are trying to wreck industry by foisting union on it, but that he and Mr. Roosevelt, cooperating as Henry would have you think they do, will save the situation, oh boy, oh boy!

Henry says this when he knows that it is Mr. Roosevelt and not the bankers who are spurring union labor on! Come on, you old America!

• • • •

It is alleged that the White House made some changes and then approved the fantastic motion picture "Gabriel Over the White House." Ye gawds, we've been ruled for a year by a movie—come on America!

NRA again promises to sock Morgan, proletariat cheers—oh boy, oh boy!

Jimmy Roosevelt, in Massachusetts, opposes his mother in the matter of the child labor amendment—come on America! Hoboes preparing for convention in New York, demand representation on Brain Trust to develop what country is to do with its added leisure—oh boy, oh boy!

White House, according to one press service, probably wrong, intimates it didn't want Secretary Dern to extend hand to Hero Lindbergh in the first place, oh boy, oh boy—Anna Dall begins writing column in another magazine—NRA again promises to sock Morgan, proletariat cheers, oh boy, oh boy!

• • • •

"New Dealers," a book purporting to give the low down on the higher-ups of the New Deal, appears on Washington bookstands—the Democratic National Committee denies that it wrote it, oh boy, oh boy! Come on America! Congress gives Mr. Roosevelt $10,000,000 more to do something about aviation, refuses $500,000 to Mrs. Roosevelt for the operation of mail equipment factory in West Virginia—women of country said to be up in arms—oh boy, oh boy!

Republicans say it is all a lotta bunk, Administration moves to consign them to the Virgin Islands, oooooh boy!

After practicing dentistry for nine years, began a political career as Mayor of Glenwood, Minn. A member of Minnesota's Legislature in 1917-1918, he was beaten by Andrew Volstead, of dry fame, in a race for Congress. After another losing candidacy, for the Governorship, he ousted Frank B. Kellogg (later Secretary of State) from the Senate. As a Farmer-Laborite, he became a party by himself, his favor courted politically and socially by both old parties. Listed among Sons of the Wild Jackass. One of the farm bloc. Tall, gaunt, with a mane of iron-gray hair, his oratory is flavored with a trace of inherited accent. Once considered a "dangerous radical," but tamed by effete Washington. Generally for, but not of, the New Deal.

Gentle Methods Will Catch Both Kinds of Fish

By Robert Quillen

Some years ago, when I was writing a weekly page for a magazine, I sent in a batch of stuff that included a fish story. It must have seemed too fishy, for it wasn't printed.

Now, as the bait-digging season approaches, I shall tell it again for the information of far-away fishermen—knowing full well that the Philistines will accept no part of it.

Many years ago, in England, poor men who poached on the estates of the rich developed a novel method of catching fish in shallow brooks.

Having smeared one arm with clay, they would lie down close to the water's edge and reach into the quiet depths beneath an overhanging bank to find a sleeping trout or salmon.

How they landed the fish I do not profess to know, but that was the method of approach as described by English writers.

The origin of this word is obscure and the word itself confusing. It can't be related to the verb, "to grab," for a grab is a violent seizing and the art of grabbling requires a gentle and delicate caress.

Perhaps it is known to fishermen in many regions, but I have never heard it mentioned anywhere except in South Carolina.

South Carolina people have preserved many of the traits and customs that came over with the first English settlers—saying "nev-you" when they mean "nephew," and things like that—and it is probable that the art of grabbling was introduced by some forefather who was a poacher.

Men of the older generations are the experts. They work close to the bank, where fish rest, but they wade in the water or swim and dive where the water is deep.

Having found a fish, possibly at a depth of 6 feet, they reach beneath him and rub him gently until his suspicions are lulled and then insert a quick thumb and forefinger in his gills.

Old-timers, who can "stay under" for 60 seconds, sometimes come up with a fish in each hand—which is no mean feat.

That's the story, and it does sound rather fishy to a stranger; but it's an old story to South Carolina fish.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

The Desert Island Library.

Every now and then some one comes along with the question, if you were marooned on a desert island, and could not escape for some years, what books would you choose first to take with you, provided you were allowed to choose at all?

Of course the question is meant to point out books whose contents are inexhaustible; books that one may read and reread, and always find something new and rich and strange. The last books one would choose—for by necessity one could take only a few—would be detective stories; for after one has found out the answer, the riddle ceases to be alluring. Detective stories are usually read only once, though I am aware there are exceptions, like the tales about Sherlock Holmes.

Shakespeare and Dickens would be among the first I should take with me, for these authors improve with every reading. It is said that familiarity breeds contempt; but it usually breeds contempt only in contemptible minds able to prompt you if you forget any part of it, so we always love best to hear that music the next note of which we hear in our mind just before it is played or sung. Shakespeare and Dickens we love for that reason and also for a very different reason; because they not only bring to our minds things we had forgotten, but because we see even in familiar passages things we had hitherto failed to see.

Boswell's "Life of Johnson," with its host of interesting characters, its brilliant conversations, its colossal protagonist, is another book for the lonely isle. I should also take selections from the poems of Robert Browning, for I believe that the solitude would be so thickly peopled with the creatures of his imagination, and the vitality of the poet's spirit would be so pervasive, that while I was reading him I should not care whether I were on a desert island or in Times Square.

Cooper to Tell Version Today To Grand Jury

Court Gives Closed Bank's President the Right to Testify.

Col. Wade H. Cooper, president of the closed Commercial National Bank, will be permitted to testify before the District grand jury today when that body resumes its investigation of the affairs of the bank.

That was disclosed yesterday when Justice Peyton Gordon in District Supreme Court, dismissed an indictment charging Col. Cooper and Bates Warren with conspiring to misapply funds of the bank, and with actually misapplying some $90,000 of the bank's money.

The fact that the old indictment against Warren and Cooper failed to charge them with "knowledge" of the irregularities was deemed to render it so vague that Justice Gordon dismissed the indictment.

The indictment dismissed yesterday charged Col. Cooper and Warren with conspiring to misapply $329,000 of the funds of the bank, and with actual misapplication of approximately $90,000. Both these charges are nullified by Justice Gordon's action.

No End of Books

ONE afternoon, while he was playing five-a-day in vaudeville, Phil Cook remarked that Whitman's chocolates were very nice chocolates. The following day the manufacturer sent him a 10-pound box. It took Phil practically no time at all, when next he was doing his turn, to mention the gift. Then he smiled hopefully at the audience, took a step toward the footlights, and declaimed in a loud voice: "The Cadillac always was a good car!"

I feel by no means so blithely optimistic at mentioning Arthur Pound's "The Turning Wheel" (Doubleday-Doran, $3.50), a long and detailed series of hosannas for General Motors and its twenty-fifth birthday. The book is a species of advertising, to be sure, and sometimes this becomes tiresomely obvious. But because the roots of General Motors go so far back into the carriage business and the infant automobile trade, and because this vast and sprawling corporation occupies so central a position in the automotive industry, a history of the company is a history of the automobile itself.

You will remember Mr. Pound for his editing of Clarence W. Barron's lively notes in two volumes. He brings to the task in hand an astounding patience for facts and figures—much of the book reads like a corporate financial sheet, and is quite as dull to the innocent bystander. He also brings as scanty a narrative skill and as inert a sense of proportion as a man well might who would take on such a project. But you will soon learn to skip judiciously, and in this mountain of material you are sure to find a handsome array of interesting nuggets. Much credit must go to William Heyer, whose neat little drawings enliven the text considerably.

In 1892, Charles and Frank Duryea built and ran at Springfield, Mass., the "first successfully operated American gasoline car." That is one of the few positive priorities which can be assigned in the history of the automobile, even of mechanical transportation.

For the history of self-propelled vehicles, from that of Hero of Alexandria, about 130 B. C., to those of Daimler, Benz, Levassor & Panhard, and Clegg in the 1880's, is one of tentative advances and inconclusive inventions. All one can say is that dozens of men contributed some part or other, and by and by the automobile (a name given to the contrivance by the French Academy) began to take shape.

• • • •

If there were other great names in the inventing of autos, the leading name in the manufacturing was that of Ransom E. Olds. In 1891 he sold a steam-driven vehicle to a purchaser in India, the first recorded sale of an American self-propelled machine. Later he turned to gasoline motors, and in 1897 he built the first Oldsmobile, now on display in the Smithsonian. In 1901 appeared the famous curved-dash runabout, the first quantity car in the country. Roy D. Chapin, later president of Hudson Motors and Secretary of Commerce, drove one from Detroit to New York in seven and one-half days—a record. By 1905, 5,000 runabouts a year were produced. They sold for $650 apiece.

One was called the "Pirate," in 1903 the first American car to go a mile in less than a minute. Another, "Old Scout" by name, crossed the continent in 1905—taking 44 days for the 4,400 miles. Olds resigned from the company in 1903. His reputation was so great that he received a large stock interest in another company for the mere use of his initials—R. E. O.

Cadillac, in 1908, was the first American winner of the London Dewar award—for interchangeability of parts. Henry M. Leland, the founder of the firm, had been trained in the precision of the New England arsenals and arms factories. In 1913 Cadillac won the Dewar trophy again, this time for pioneering in electric starting, lighting and ignition. Credit here must go to Charles Kettering, inventor of the self-starter and founder of the Dayton Engineering Laboratory Co.—Delco. With Oakland and Pontiac and many other firms, W. C. Durant built all these into General Motors, born on September 16, 1908.

The corporation grew enormously. But it missed one chance. In 1909 Henry Ford offered to sell his company for $8,000,000. Durant was ready to accept. But the bankers behind General Motors said they had changed their minds—"the Ford business is not worth that much money."

Radio Station KPL offers as a special feature next Saturday night a broadcast over a National network of how much money everybody in town gets a week. The series will continue throughout the year, with a grand prize contest in which seven automobiles will be given to lucky citizens coming nearest to guessing the correct salaries of prominent business leaders.

J. Withersby Spratt, vice president in charge of operations at the soap works, accepted a raise in salary last week and is being denounced as an unpatriotic scoundrel.

• • • •

Senator Addison Bigmouth, father of a bill to limit all salaries to $50,000 a year, has resigned his seat to accept a position as general counsel for the soup spoon trust at an annual stipend of $200,000. When asked how he reconciled this step with his official acts as a legislator, the Senator professed deafness and a bad memory.

Jeff Wiggins was voted a raise of $2,500 a year as president of the Moose Hollow Railroad today and immediately notified all the newspapers in accordance with the law.

TEACHING THE YOUNG ITALIAN IDEA—

Italy has opened night schools for the instruction of youths in handling machine guns. There is nothing like a good sound education to keep a boy from getting into trouble.

You can imagine the feelings of an Italian parent whose little boy Tony can't pass his spelling or arithmetic exams, but who was so smart with a machine gun he skipped two grades.

A Russian princess has been awarded $126,750 on a verdict that an American movie company produced a picture in which one of the characters libeled her. We know a man who now plans to sue the producers of "King Kong." And a fat lady who is contemplating action against the producers of "Chang," the elephant picture.

The CWA drive against rats in Brooklyn has been abandoned. It was found to be costing $70 a rat. What stopped the drive was that all the mice were getting swelled heads.

Three More Join PWA as Reviewers

Ickes Names Trio to Aid in Knotty Cases.

Appointment of three additional members of the Public Works Administration technical board of review was announced yesterday by Secretary Ickes.

The new members are R. E. Lee Taylor, Baltimore architect; Clifford W. Ham, municipal finance consultant of Chicago, and Carl H. Chatters, also a municipal finance expert of Chicago.

The board of review, composed of a group of outstanding engineers and technicians headed by Maj. Carey H. Brown, was formed to consider PWA projects of a particularly difficult or controversial nature.

Lionhearted Leo Sues for Divorce And Asks Alimony

San Diego, Calif., March 15 (AP).—Leo Bookman, 35, is seeking $200 monthly alimony, the award of $7,500 and custody of a 4-year-old son, in a divorce action against Esther Bookman.

The couple married in New York City in 1928. Bookman, asserting his spouse has an ungovernable temper, said he gave up his employment as a salad maker in a cafeteria to devote all his time to his wife.

There's A Reason

WHEN a large number of people are moving in one direction it is not only human nature but a worth-while idea to follow them!

Judy O'Grady and the Colonel's lady are, in truth, "sisters under the skin." What interests one is almost certain to interest the other. And so, when you follow the crowd you invariably find something that interests YOU, too.

Curiosity may draw you first, but did you ever follow a crowd without finding something interesting at the destination? . . . Of course you didn't! . . . Possibly it was a fire, an accident, or some person of prominence whom all wanted to see. In any event, you found that the attraction which held the interest of the crowd also had a personal appeal for you!

*** *** ***

"The crowd" is now being attracted to The Washington Post in ever increasing numbers. . . . Perhaps it is curiosity that first impels them—they are wondering why everyone is speaking of, and quoting, The Washington Post . . . They come to find out, and in this newspaper they find a particular, personal appeal that makes them permanent followers.

Follow the crowd! . . . See what the excitement is all about. Note the exclusive reports of significant events by authoritative writers in every field of news affairs; the complete, accurate and concise coverage of every happening; the many new, informative or entertaining, features and the physical improvement that mark The Washington Post as a NEW and distinctive nwespaper!

The Crowd is now following—

Criticized Contract With Papagos Expires on April 4.

An attorneys' contract between the Papago Indians of Arizona and Bascom Slemp and two other lawyers which was sharply criticized Wednesday by the House Indian Affairs Committee will be allowed to die a natural death next month, Secretary of the Interior Ickes said yesterday.

The contract, approved by John H. Edwards, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, in 1929, named Slemp, former secretary to Calvin Coolidge; C. C. Calhoun, Washington, and Eugene L. Graves, Los Angeles, as attorneys for the Indians, to represent them in advancing claims regarding mineral rights within their lands. The House committee voted to ask Secretary Ickes to cancel the contract, terming it a "tryannical act," giving the three men a chance to make millions.

Ickes announced that the contract expires April 4 and will not be renewed.

PEOPLE wanting to keep pigs in the house should get in touch with the sound effects department of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Columbia hasn't any pigs, but it does have some very good sound effects records of them—for instance, sound effects record No. 1032 which you can buy from the Genett Sound Effects Record Co. for $2.10. Record No. 1032 was made right out in the pigsty on a day when the pigs were unusually noisy. An excellent opportunity, we should say, for people with landladies too utterly nouveau riche for anything as homey as pigs. Quite a lot of fuss and bother saved, too. And as for people who do keep pigs in the house, they, if need be, may roast their pigs and have them, too.

The Genett Sound Effects Record Co. probably would be very happy to make records of canaries, parrots or police dogs.

GEN. JOHNSON probably doesn't know it, but WJSV got a pretty good idea from him yesterday.

The Columbia station has decided to hold an open season for radio program haters along the lines of the General's field day for NRA critics.

Anything will go and there will be no bag limits. Haters may get up early in the morning and shoot all day and far into the night, if they like. They may write letters about anything and everything. They may phone. They may even come up for an audition if they think they're good.

Everything will be done to encourage them—everything, that is, except offering a bounty of, say, 50 cents for the head of every crooner they bring in. That properly is the function of the Federal Radio Commission.

N. B. C. listeners will have a chance to hear the U. S. Weather Bureau "making" weather one of these days. A behind-the-scenes view of forecasting will be supplied the network by one of the local stations before the first of the month. Thirty minutes is to be cleared for the program—a good chance for Willis R. Gregg, Weather Bureau chief, to explain what happened last month.

Another brainstorm of National's Washington program department is a spelling bee, scheduled for early in April. Two students from each of the high schools will take part. Mrs. J. T. Holloway and Mrs. J. L. Parrish, of the Parent-Teacher Association, will be in charge.

Getting personal . . .

Without bothering to explain, the sponsors of the new Martini-Ponselle-Stueckold program have made up their minds not to use Arthur Godfrey . . . Gertrude Berg, of the "Goldbergs," writes all her scripts in longhand . . . Freddie Rich celebrates his thirty-fifth birthday tomorrow . . . George Gershwin says only five American female singers comprehend modern rhythm—Baby Rose Marie, Mildred Bailey, Sophie Tucker, Ethel Merman and Aunt Jemima . . . as a preacher, Anthony Frome, "The Poet Prince," sang bass, thinking deep, resonant tones more proper for a minister . . . when he started singing professionally he discovered, to his surprise, that he actually was a tenor . . . Johnny Green makes caricatures of artists on his programs during rehearsals . . . Frances Langford adopted singing as a career because it would give her plenty of time to rest . . . now she has three commercial programs, appears nightly in a New York night spot and makes her debut in "The Pure Heart," a dramatic show, today . . . Bing Crosby is the network's champion joiner . . . he pays dues at the Friars', the Thalians, New York Athletic Club, the Uplifters, Lakeside Golf Club, Artists' and Writers' and the Tuna Club . . . Columbia claims that reception of its broadcast of Johnny Green's show, "Big Business," from London the other day was so clear that a few people called up to complain about the "phony" English accents . . . fortunately, John Dyer, C. B. S. engineer with the Byrd Expedition, is one of those people whose favorite sport is skiing

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Blackie Had to Work for His Dinner

WHILE Mr. Man was whetting his knife on his shoe, Blackie began to wiggle his ears and one foot.

"Ah-ha, old fellow, thought you would kill my donkey did you? Well, since you are not dead, I reckon I'll let you do enough work to pay for your dinner before I skin you. You are nearly as big as Hee-Haw, and I reckon his harness will stay on you. Hey, Hee-Haw, come here." Hee-Haw was glad enough to come, for he could see a lot of rest that he was going to get.

So Mr. Man took Hee-Haw's harness off of him and put them on Blackie, while he was lying there stunned on the ground, and then he took his jug of water and poured it into Blackie's ear. Cold water on the head is about the best thing that can be used on a man when he has fainted, as people sometimes do, and it was just as good to bring Blackie back to life. As soon as his senses came to him and he opened his eyes and saw Mr. Man standing there, he made one great rearing jump, or rather he tried to, but something was stuck in his mouth and jerked him so that he thought his head was split open. Yes, Mr. Man had put the bridle on his head, and was standing there with the driving lines in his hands, and he slapped them on Blackie's back and said, "Get up here and step into these wagon shafts, and let's work a little." Mr. Man had a good deal of trouble in wiggling Blackie about till he got him hitched to the wagon, but after a while it was done, and he piled a load of wood on the wagon and started to his house.

When He-Haw saw Blackie going off pulling the wagon load of wood, and Mr. Man sitting up there popping the whip over his head, he threw his head up and laughed "He-Haw" so loud you could have heard him a mile. Then he laid down on the ground and rolled over and over like a dog, and then he got up and laughed some more. It was certainly funny the way he had turned the joke on Blackie. And there was plenty of fun for everybody except Blackie, for Mr. Man was having a good time doing something that he had never heard of anybody else doing—driving a bear about in a wagon, hauling wood. Wouldn't he have something to tell Uncle Joe the next time he saw him? Indeed, he would.

In Mrs. Moo Cow's Pasture.

Mr. Man kept on hauling wood till most sunset, and if Hee-Haw hadn't been so tickled over his joke, and so anxous to tell somebody how smart he had been in getting somebody else to do his work, Blackie might have been hauling wood for him yet; but he went off in Mrs. Moo Cow's pasture to find her and tell her about his joke. While he was gone, Mr. Man came back for another load of wood, and when he saw his donkey was gone, he hitched Blackie to a tree and went to look for Hee-Haw. As soon as Mr. Man got out of sight Blackie went to work to get out of the wagon. It didn't take long to gnaw the rope in two, and then he began wiggling to get out of the harness. It was a hard job, but Blackie never quit anything because it was hard, and after a while he got out, and then of all the running he ever did in his life, Billie Possum says Blackie did the best.

Green Pleads For Wagner's Control Bill

Cites Peril of Strikes in Advocating Permanent Labor Board.

pion of the Wagner bill. The committee next week will hear the views of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, National recovery administrator, another advocate of passage.

The bill was described by its author, Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, chairman of the National Labor Board, as designed to broaden the board's powers, prevent employers from dominating organized labor and specifically legalize the closed union shop.

Both Green and Father Francis J. Haas, member of the National Labor Board and director of the National Catholic School of Social Service, warned of impending strikes and insisted the Wagner proposal would give the board adequate weapons for enforcement of NRA labor provisions.

Green contended the board had learned it was useless to use persuasion with employers.

Blames Minority.

"The employers who are systematically challenging and impeding the action of the National Labor Board," he declared, "are in the minority. We must not, in fact we can not, permit the lawless few deliberately to destroy an agency which the cooperate majority are willing and eager to support.

"There will always be some employers who yield only to coercion, to legal action. Upon these few the moral force and appeal to public opinion upon which the board has so far been forced to depend, are not sufficient. Industrial law, like civil or criminal law, is aimed at the few, and not at the many."

Father Haas explained the Wagner bill would set up machinery to prevent unfair labor practices which might curb purchasing power. He added:

"There are, of course, persons who object, and strenuously, to the proposed machinery but in my opinion this machinery is the only possible method of increasing buying power now and of maintaining it, and thereby putting the country on a lasting basis of prosperity.

"In laying the foundation for permanent industrial peace and prosperity, the dominant aim will be to increase purchasing power constantly.

Reports Violations.

"This result, in my judgment, can be obtained only by assuring workers a larger and larger share of the National income, and this in turn can only be obtained by unhampered, unrestrained collective bargaining. This is the long run purpose of the bill before you and I beg to express the urgent hope that it will be enacted into law."

The witness reported many employers violated NRA labor provisions, "but take refuge in the claim that they observed the language of the statute. The need of freedom from employer dominated unions is patent."

Father Haas cited a case involving 4,000 workers in which the employer's labor adjuster and two attorneys for the employes received half of their pay from both employer and worker. He discredited such methods.

"I believe in time the board will develop a body of precedents to act as guiding principles in effectuating mutual agreements," he said. "It will educate disputants to settle differences between themselves."

Sidney Hillman, garment workers' representative on the NRA Labor Advisory Board, testified passage of the bill would prevent employers from coercing workers and forcing their affiliation with company unions.

Warns of Failure.

"Unless this bill is upheld," he warned, "the NRA will degenerate into an organization controlled by monopolistic groups and will fail for lack of enforcement of labor provisions. Unless labor is protected we are heading for a great deal of unrest, all uncalled for."

Another Wagner supporter, Charlton Ogburn, representing New York street railway workers, predicted passage would convert the National Labor Board into "a great National labor court. The board should become a powerful independent agency like the Interstate Commerce Commission."

He insisted passage would produce prosperity and more even distribution of wealth. He said the measure would meet the needs of labor and the people as a whole.

The bill was praised by Fuller E. Hochkiss, Chicago engineer, and Jacob Panken, New York, speaking for the Socialist party, taxicab, silk and baking workers.

Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench, wife of a St. Louis physician, pianist of ability and a fancier of chow dogs, who has been indicted at St. Louis, Mo. She is charged with being the "brains" of the 1931 kidnaping of Dr. Isaac D. Kelley, who was freed uninjured and without payment of ransom.

Woman Named As Kidnap Plot Brain Gives Up

Mrs. Muench Posts Bond After Dodging Arrest for Two Days.

St. Louis, March 15 (AP).—Veiled and visibly shaking, Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench, comely wife of a St. Louis physician, surrendered today on an indictment charging the kidnaping of Dr. Isaac D. Kelley.

Several hundred persons crowded the St. Louis County courthouse, while attorneys posted $50,000 bond and arranged for her release.

Mrs. Muench was taken to the Bertillon room for fingerprinting and photographing.

"You're a hell of a guy," she remarked when a deputy told her to remove her hat and veil in front of the camera. At the sheriff's office where she was booked she said she had been arrested twice on suspicion of larceny.

Her surrender ended a two-day search during which she was touring southern Illinois to evade arrest until her attorneys were assured she would be released on bond.

The indictment against her was returned Tuesday and named Felix McDonald, an inmate of the Missouri Penitentiary; Bart Davit, an acquaintance of McDonald; Angelo Rosegrant, reputed gangster; Tommy Wilders, Shelton gangster said to be in Florida, and John C. Johnson, Negro tenant on a farm where Dr. Kelley was believed a prisoner after he was kidnaped in February, 1931.

Mrs. Muench is alleged to have been the "brains" of the gang.

The physician's wife, known in St. Louis as a talented musician and former proprietor of an exclusive dress shop, vehemently denied connection with the abduction.

Dr. Kelley, prominent eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, was lured from his home by a fake call. He later was released, reputedly without payment of ransom.

Playing Horse Fatal.

Rogers Probe To Scan CCC Supply Buying

Fechner to Testify on Procurement Moves for Committee.

Purchases made by the War Department for the Civilian Conservation Corps will be studied today by the Rogers Investigating Committee, which has summoned Robert Fechner, director of Emergency Conservation Work, as its first witness.

Fire extinguishers, raincoats, trucks and lumber are among the procurement factors concerning which the House military group desires information.

Testifying before the House Appropriations Committee last month, Fechner told of having changed specifications on fire extinguishers to permit one of the country's largest manufacturers to compete in bidding on contracts, whereas requirements laid down by the office of the Assistant Secretary of War would have unduly restricted competition.

The Rogers committee has been inquiring particularly in to the purchase of trucks, Harry H. Woodring, Assistant Secretary of War, having testified earlier in the week that haste in the procurement of motorized equipment for the Civilian Conservaiton Corps was due to urgent request of Fechner.

City May Cut Lighting.

Canton, Ohio (U.P.).—Canton City council is considering curtailment of the city's street lighting system as an economy move. The city pays the Ohio Power Co. approximately $140,000 per year for street lighting and already is in arrears to the company, according to council.

Restored Pay Action Held Up By Legal Quirk

House Special Order Due; Senate Seeks to Send Bill to Conference.

the President in the form which it passed the Senate. If Woodrum's motion is adopted, the bill will go to conference, but the conferees will be bound to bargain between the House and the Senate amendments, according to Woodrum.

While the House on Wednesday made it clear that it favored the 5-and-5 pay compromise and the Taber veterans' benefits plan, which would increase allowances by $90,000,000 as against $118,000,000 in the Senate amendments, a small attendance today might reverse its stand.

Conference Next Week.

The Vinson pay plan was adopted, 185 to 101, after three votes had been taken, and the Taber amendment was passed, 222 to 191. On the latter, however, a number of members changed their votes from aye to nay after they saw that the amendment was about to be adopted.

Whatever action is taken in the House today, there will be no conference before next week, Woodrum said, as the Senate has recessed until Monday and Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, who is chairman of the Senate conferees, has left the city for the week-end.

The consensus of leaders on both sides of the Capitol yesterday was that the 5-and-5 pay plan for Government employes will be accepted ultimately by both houses and by the President, though it may contain some additional benefits.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, sponsor of the full-pay clause, indicated he would still fight for his amendment. It was believed that the Senate conferees would be willing, however, to exchange the additional 5 per cent restoration for an elimination of the administrative furloughs now authorized by the economy act.

Should the furlough system be abolished, Government employes on the whole would gain more than they would by getting the disputed 5 per cent pay.

The fight over veterans' benefits has centered around the differences in allowances granted the Spanish-American War veterans and their dependents by the two Houses.

Veteran Controversies.

Senator Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, sponsor of the veterans' amendment which passed the Senate, pointed out that the House amendment cuts about 1,200 Spanish-American War veterans off the compensation rolls. He also pointed out that it reduces the benefits for presumptive World War cases from 100 per cent to 75 per cent.

A minor difference between the Senate and the House exists over the latter's elimination of benefits to 2,000 emergency officers in the Army.

The House amendment also eliminated the double pensions for widows and dependents of officers and enlisted men who died in Navy dirigible disasters, and the provision that the Veterans' Administration recognize a court ruling that a veteran is 100 per cent disabled. These are not so controversial, however.

Cat Awarded Cream For Rescuing Family

Hartford, Conn. (U.P.).—Dr. C. W. Stephenson's pet cat got an extra platter of cream for being a hero in a fire which destroyed the physician's $80,000 home.

Tabby wailed so loud she aroused the doctor who, thinking she wanted to go out, opened the door into the hall. Smoke and flames shot into the room. Dr. Stephenson aroused other members of the family, helped them to safety and then rescued the cat.

Behler Urges New Care on Autoists

Plan to Cut Down Huge Death Toll Sought.

Individual effort, rather than massed action, was urged by T. F. Behler, of the American Automobile Association, in an address yesterday before the Cosmopolitan Club at the Carlton Club, as a means of decreasing the terrific toll of deaths from accidents on Washington streets.

He advocated more selective enforcement of the laws as a measure for increased safety.

Behler pointed out that 32 per cent of such fatilities occur between 5 and 9 p. m.

Tully's Son Sentenced To Prison for Attack

Los Angeles, March 15 (AP).—Sentence of 1 to 15 years in San Quentin was imposed today on Thomas A. Tully, son of Jim Tully, writer, for attempting to attack Mrs. Violet Robey, 24, Monterey Park housewife, last December 4.

Win Yet Lose A Baseball Paradox

Baseball dances to the tune of the turnstile and how painfully sour it is when the hinges creak a lament of public disinterest. Easy flag victories are costly, paradoxically enough, and the 1933 Washington triumph in the pennant race is evidence. Only Time Can Age Whiskey

Tier upon tier of charred oaken casks hold these millions of gallons of Seagram's for at least five years. They are constantly under the lock and key and supervision of governmental officials. The temperature in our maturing warehouses is under constant thermostatic control.

From the largest stocks of properly distilled and aged rye and bourbon whiskies in the world come these famous brands, bearing names which guarantee their wholesome purity and *untampered maturity

There is a Seagram whiskey to suit every taste. Not just a limited quantity. Not just enough for one brand. But enough millions of gallons properly distilled and properly aged to guarantee constant uniformity of all Seagram brands.

There is full-bodied straight rye with the rich flavor and fragrance ideal in highballs. There is bourbon matured to full bloom in the finest old Kentucky mint julep tradition. There are the lighter mellow whiskies that are so popular in cocktails.

Every drop of Seagram's whiskey is bottled in bond. The age of every drop is guaranteed by the official government stamp over the neck of each bottle. The patented tamper-proof closure used exclusively by Seagram guarantees "untampered maturity".

Try Seagram's. Sip its mellow smoothness. You'll find the answer inside the bottle. There is no finer whiskey than Seagram's. Not a drop less than 5 years old.

Washington Entertains Young Leading Man—New Week's Screen and Stage Bills

Cast in New Dietrich Film; Some Gold Medal Awards; Coming Programs.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Mr. John Davis Lodge, scion of a distinguished New England family, yesterday was awakened to the fact that an ostensibly quiet personal visit with relatives in Washington had been practically ruined by the seeping out of the knowledge that he also is Marlene Dietrich's leading man in the Josef von Sternberg picturization of the life of Catherine the Great, of Russia, known to the trade as "The Scarlet Empress."

JOHN LODGE.

As a young actor so importantly cast as this, Mr. Lodge immediately became public property and was harassed no little by certain of the dramatic desks yesterday morning in the spacious Georgetown home of his avuncular hosts, Gen. and Mrs. Clarence Williams.

Concerning the respective merits of the oft-contrasted arts of the living and celluloid theaters, Mr. Lodge has decided and wholly defensible ideas. Aside from a few modest college essays at Gilbert and Sullivan, which probably all of us have tackled now and again in moments of extreme exaltation, Mr. Lodge has never been on the stage.

Was Successful Barrister.

His vocation, up to October 15, 1932, was the law. His vocation since October 15, 1932, has been the screen. During that interval he has appeared in three earlier films for Paramount, with Katharine Hepburn in "Little Women," for RKO-Radio, and only escaped the leading role in "Double Door," Paramount's picturization of the stage play recently seen at the National, by an eyelash in favor of his present jaunt back East to old friends and old haunts.

In his meteoric rise from unknown to leading man with one of the most glamorous — to coin a word—stars of the contemporary cinema, Mr. Lodge has come to believe that there is subtle, secure, but at times submerged art capable of great things buried underneath the surface claptrap and pother of the films. He does not believe that it is necessarily a greater art than that of the traditional theater, but most assuredly neither does he believe that the art of the traditional theater appreciably transcends that of the gelatine drama.

Observes Strict Ethics.

Naturally, he declines to be drawn into any discussion of the comparative merits of the two screen stories relating to the same subject matter that have come upon the public simultaneously from such widely separated sources — "Catherine the Great", directed by Alexander Korda in England, with Elizabeth Bergner and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in the principal roles, and "The Scarlet Empress", directed by Herr von Sternberg, with La Dietrich, himself, C. Aubrey Smith, Louise Dresser and others of note conspicuously cast.

It is not impossible, however, for one to guess which he deems the better job. But ethics being what they are, you get the idea.

Concerning the leading women with whom his most impressive acting chores have been performed, Mr. Lodge is the gallant gentleman. Miss Dietrich is a charming artiste, devoid of all the temperamental quirks of nature with which she has been endowed by flamboyant "fan" magazine writers; Katherine Hepburn is no less to be applauded for like reasons, thus confirming a personal impression formed during an enjoyable visit with Miss Hepburn during her recent appearance here at the National in "The Lake".

Grandson of Late Senator.

There is, as a matter of fact, the stamp of the cultivated gentleman in all that Mr. Lodge says and does. The grandson of the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, he has the background of distinguished family tradition. Educated at Harvard, in Paris and at the Harvard Law School, he practiced law for three years prior to launching his film career, one of his clients, by an odd twist of chance, having been Paramount, the company to which he is now under contract as a film player.

He is married to the equally talented Francesca Braggiotti, a member of a family famous in the arts —Mario, a gifted concert pianist, another brother a stage actor, and a sister, if my memory is on straight, a dancer, like herself.

Mr. and Mrs. Lodge proceed today to Philadelphia, thence on to New York and then back by boat through the Canal to Hollywood for a resumption of their screen work.

Mrs. Lodge recently completed a contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to "dub in" dialogue for the Italian version of the Greta Garbo releases.

A minute examination of a complete set of production "stills"—which is motion-picture slang for still photography—on "The Scarlet Empress," indicates it to be the most imposing of all the Josef von Sternberg productions to date. In many of the scene photographs there is evident a degree of artistic composition that will lend the picture notable worth, regardless of what sort of dramatic and dialogue treatment the colorful story of a brilliant ruler of Russia has been given.

"Reporter" Beats Gun!

Speaking of Katharine Hepburn, as somebody has been, the Hollywood Reporter, a West Coast trade paper, yesterday anticipated by one day the annual awards of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences by giving gold medal prizes for the year's best acting to her in recognition of her work in "Morning Glory" and to Charles Laughton for his performance in "The Private Life of Henry VIII," made in London by the same director responsible for the forthcoming "Catherine the Great."

For the year's best direction, the award was made to Frank Capra for his "Lady for a Day," starring May Robson. Other awards were to "Little Women," RKO-Radio, as the best picture; to Charles Land, Paramount, for the best photography, in "A Farewell to Arms;" to Preston Sturges, Fox, for the best original story, "The Power and the Glory," and to Cedric Gibbons, the husband of Dolores Del Rio, for the best art direction, in "When Ladies Meet," M-G-M.

As stated, the Hollywood Reporter announced its findings, determined by balloting throughout the industry, a day in advance of the Motion Picture Academy, whose determinations in such things are deemed the last word in authentic recognition of superior talents.

Contrary to recent announcement, which seemed permanently to place a ban on such programs, Loew's Palace Theater makes known that on Saturday, March 24, a special early matinee will be given for juveniles and adults, at a flat admission charge of 25 cents, at which the program will consist of seven Walt Disney "Mickey Mouse" and "Silly Symphony" cartoon comedy subjects. The performance will begin promptly at 9:30 a. m.

The Mickey Mouse subjects will be "Trader Horn," "Whoopee Party" and "Wayward Canary;" the Silly Symphonies, "King Neptune," "Birds in the Spring," "Noah's Ark" and "The Pied Piper."

The New Bills.

More immediately to hand, however, are these attractions to be featured in the downtown, first-run picture houses, for the week beginning to day at the Rialto and tomorrow in the others:

Loew's Fox

Robert Montgomery's most exciting role, as the debonair gentleman thief in the thrilling picture, "The Mystery of Mr. X," and Sid Gary, "The Voice of Radio," headlining "The Broadway Round-Up," feature Loew's Fox Theater's entertainment menu for the week starting tomorrow.

"The Mystery of Mr. X." is Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of the Crime Club novel by Philip MacDonald. It offers high adventure, throughout which is woven a delicate love story. The story concerns the activities of a mysterious Mr. X, whose murderous activities have Scotland Yard baffled and all London aghast.

Elizabeth Allen plays the romantic lead opposite the suave Montgomery. Others in principal roles are Lewis Stone, Ralph Forbes, Henry Stephenson and Forrester Harvey.

The stage revue, "The Broadway Round-Up," is being presented here for the first time on any stage, having been especially produced by Louis K. Sidney. Gene Ford, of Loew's production staff, will personally supervise its presentation. Backing the star, Sid Gary, are Stuart and Lash, Broadway comics; Harrison and Fisher, the dancing stars of "Strike Me Pink;" Melissa Mason, high-stepping kicker, and the Capitol Theater Ballet Corps.

Phil Lampkin and the Fox Orchestra feature another of their popular overture arrangements and news events and short subjects round out the bill.

Earle

"Let's Fall in Love," the screen feature based on the famous song hit, and Sophie Tucker, "last of the red-hot mamas," will share screen and stage honors at Warner Bros.' Earle Theater starting tomorrow.

From a circus concession attendant to a glamorous motion picture star! That is the transformation undergone by Ann Sothern, newest Columbia screen discovery, in the romantic Hollywood musical, "Let's Fall in Love." Proving that Hollywood can be fooled, Edmund Lowe, cast as a motion picture director in this captivating production, finds Miss Sothern working in a circus. He teaches her Swedish, buys her a stunning wardrobe, introduces her as "off the boat" and an enviable motion picture contract results.

Arlen and Koehler, authors of "Stormy Weather," "Minnie, the Moocher" and many other hits, composed the tunes featured in "Let's Fall in Love." Miriam Jordan, Tala Birell, Gregory Ratoff and Arthur Jarrett enact the featured supporting roles.

Sophie Tucker returns to Washington after an absence of six years to headline the vaudeville bill. Other acts are Ross and Bennett in "No Sense and Nonsense;" Gaudsmith Brothers in "A Round Trip of Fun," and Van Horn and Inez, with Betty Lytle, America's premier skaters.

Added short reels, the Graham McNamee newsreel and the Earle orchestral prelude will complete the program.

Palace

Will Rogers brings to life one of the most beloved characters of American fiction with his performance of the title role in "David Harum," which Loew's Palace unreels tomorrow.

The novel, by Edward Noyes Westcott, has been converted into an enjoyable film.

Rogers is pictured as the shrewd, but chivalrous, horse trader who exchanges witticisms as he drives sharp bargains, and underneath a hard crust harbors a heart of gold. Sandwiched in between his allegedly cold and unethical barterings is a romance between a poor bank clerk and a wealthy girl which he personally fosters and helps bring to a happy conclusion.

Kent Taylor and Evelyn Venable are the romantic pair. Others in the cast are Louise Dresser, Noah Beery, Roger Imhof and Stepin Fetchit. James Cruze directed this new Rogers film.

Short subjects, an amusing comedy and news events are also on the program.

Metropolitan

Warner Bros. Metropolitan Theater, starting tomorrow, will offer the second week of their new policy with a two-and-a-half-hour show, including a first-run feature and a variety program of short reels.

The feature will be United Artists' "Advice to the Lovelorn," starring Lee Tracy and Sally Blane.

"In Advice to the Lovelorn," wisecracking Lee Tracy is seen as a flip young reporter on a Los Angeles daily whose propensity for hard liquor causes him to muff the biggest story of the year by sleeping peacefully through an earthquake.

Sally Blane plays the sweetheart for whose sake Tracy tries to worm his way out of the humiliating job. Featured with Sally are Isabel Jewel, Paul Harvey, Judith Wood, May Boley, Sterling Holloway, C. Henry Gordon, Jean Adair, Adalyn Doyle and Etienne Girardot.

Heading the short reel bill is "Business Is a Pleasure," a Vitaphone Technicolor comedy starring Teddy Joyce, famous master of ceremonies, and a bevy of beautiful girls. Jane and Goodman Ace, known by millions as the "Easy Aces," appear in "Isn't That Awful," a one-reel Vitaphone comedy, a burlesque on the antics of rabid radio fans.

Art Reis and Al Dunn, radio favorites, are seen in a novelty song reel, "Let's All Sing Like the Birdies Sing." Gordon and Revel, the song writing team, are seen in Paramount Pictorial, and 15 minutes of the latest news completes the program.

Rialto

The merriest, funniest, fastest-moving comedy with music comes to the Rialto Theater today in "I Like It That Way," in which Roger Pryor and Gloria Stuart are starred.

Pryor will be recalled for the excellence of his work in "Moonlight and Pretzels." "I Like It That Way" was written by Harry Sauber, Chandler Sprague and Joseph Santley, with songs by Conrad, Mitchell and Gottler. Harry Lachman directed the production and the supporting cast includes Marian Marsh, Shirley Grey, Lucille Gleason, Noel Madison, Gloria Shea, Mae Busch, Merna Kennedy, Clarence Wilson, Eddie Wilson, Mickey Rooney and John Darrow.

"I Like It That Way" is everything a bright and exhilarating musical picture should be. It has gay tunes, lavish settings, a cast on its toes every minute of the film, new and unusual dance numbers and a story that moves along with laughs and surprises.

The Rialto completes its new program with selected screen novelties of a shorter nature.

Columbia

Teeming with emotion and abounding in richness and beauty, the drama "Carolina," with Janet Gaynor and Lionel Barrymore heading the cast, returns to Loew's Columbia Theater tomorrow, following its engagement at the Palace.

Robert Young, Henrietta Crossman, Richard Cromwell, Mona Barrie, Stepin Fetchit, Russell Simpson and others are all well cast in this picturization of Paul Green's stage play of "The House of Connelly."

The picture tells of the decadent but proud Southern family who live only in the past. A disarming and charming young girl of the North comes into their lives and shows them how to rebuild their former greatness.

"Carolina" was directed by Henry King from an adaptation by Reginald Berkely, who did similar work on "Cavalcade."

Short subjects also are on the new program.

Roger Pryor, Marian Marsh in "I Like It That Way"—Rialto.

Fete Honors Persian Shah At Legation

Anniversary of Monarch Marked by Society of Capital.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Last evening Capital society again paid its respects to Riza Shah Pahlavi, ruler of Persia, when the Minister and Mme. Djalal entertained at a large reception and dance in the Legation on Massachusetts avenue. The occasion was the celebration of the birthday anniversary of Riza Shah.

The celebration, held annually at the Persian Legation, has become familiar to members of Washington's diplomatic, official and residential society sets. This year, with the Minister and Mme. Djalal, recently established in the handsome new legation, which they redecorated, the reception was unusually brilliant.

Riza Shah Pahlavi, born in 1878, is descended from a distinguished family of Mazanderan, on the coast of the Caspian Sea. Mazanderan is one of the two provinces occupied by the first wave of the Arian invasion in 2,500 B. C. Pahlavi is the family name, and it was by that name that the Persian language was called at the period of the Sasanian dynasty which was terminated in 625 A. D.

Persian Ruler Since 1921.

In February, 1921, Riza Shah entered Persia and took possession of the government. In 1925 the National Assembly elected him as constitutional monarch.

Mme. Djalal, who is English by birth, received the several hundred guests with the Minister. She wore a smart gown of silver gray fashioned with a low decolletage and a brief train. Spring flowers in profusion decorated the large drawing rooms. A buffet supper of Persian and American dishes was served at midnight.

Among the guests were the retiring dean of the Diplomatic Corps, Mr. Ahmet Muhtar, Ambassador of Turkey; the Ambassador of Great Britain and Lady Lindsay; the Ambassador of Peru, Senor Don Manuel Freyre y Santander; the Ambassador of Brazil and Mme. de Lima e Silva, the Ambassador of Poland, Mr. Stanislaw Patek; the Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso; the Ambassador of Mexico, Senor Dr. Fernando Gonzales Roa; the Ambassador of Germany, Dr. Hans Luther; the Ambassador of Chile, Senor Don Manuel Trucco and his daughters, Senorita Graciela Trucco and Senorita Rebecca Trucco; Mme. Troyanovsky, wife of the Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics; the Ambassador of Cuba and Senora de Marques Sterling and the Ambassador of Japan and Mme Saito.

Ministers Among Guests.

The Minister of Finland, Mr. L. Astrom; the Minister of Greece and Mme. Simopoulos; the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom; the Minister of Norway and Mme. Bachke; the Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme Veverka; the Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. Michael MacWhite; the Minister of Yugoslavia, Dr. Leonide Pitamic; the Minister of Denmark and Mme. Pelenyi, the Minister of the Netherlands and Mme. van Haersma de With, the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph Close, and the Charge d'Affaires of Bulgaria and Mme. Petroff Tchomakoff.

From among the official residents of the Capital were the Speaker of the House and Mrs. Henry T. Rainey, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Dern with their daughters, Mrs. Harry Baxter and Miss Betsy Dern; the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, and Miss Grace Roper; the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Henry L. Roosevelt, with Miss Eleanor Roosevelt; the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. William Phillips and their daughter, Miss Beatrice Phillips; Senator and Mrs. William H. King, Senator and Mrs. James Couzens, Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman, Senator and Mrs. Marcus Coolidge, Senator and Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and Representative and Mrs. Fred A. Britten.

Others present were Judge John Barton Payne, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mr. Robert Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, Bishop James Ryan, the Rev Dr. W. Hunter Trials at Middleburg To Attract Society Tomorrow

Capital Groups Arrange Journey to Event at Sands Estate.

Capital society is always interested in horse shows, races and hunter trials. From now until late summer, Washington folk will travel every week-end to events in nearby Virginia.

Many parties will go to Middleburg tomorrow for the annual hunter trials at the Glenwood race course on the estate of Mr. D. C. Sands, master of fox hounds.

Mrs. John Hay Whitney, young society matron, has 21 horses entered in the hunter trials, which is the largest representation of any one stable.

The trials, twice postponed because of bad weather, will drop the curtain on the hunting season. While the track still remains heavy, it is hoped that by tomorrow the course will be in fair shape.

1933 Winner Entered.

The feature of the trials is the awarding of the $2,000 Middleburg Bowl to the horse having the highest total score. Last year Mrs. Whitney won the bowl with the gray gelding, Bon Diable, which she has entered again this year, with other winners from her stables. These include Two Leggins, Ucello, Knight of the Gaitees, War Flame, Thornbrack, Saltrello, Hush Money, Secret Meetings, Sir Langdon, Hopeful Jim, Cornelius, Bad Luck, High Feather, Dusty Foot and Silver Shield.

Among the 70 entries are Lady Clare and Stormy Weather, entered by Paul Mellon; Flying Hawk, Quidade, Dancing Princess, My Tag, Mrs. R. C. Winmill; Halle and Pompquet, Duncan H. Read; Top Twig and The Nun, Stephen Clark, jr.; Her Way and Last Thought, Miss Betsy Clark; Lord McGee, Tom Waller; Gangway and Dual Control, Frederick Warburg; two entries, B. E. B. Hall; Belfast, C. K. Hubbard; Mayor Walker and Winway, Mrs. Howard Linn; Harvey and Straw Track, Hubert Phipps; The Phanton and Black Magic, Mrs. H. E. Talbot; Camilla, C. E. Perkins; Atheny, Mrs. Amory Perkins; Tommy Atkins, George McMurty; Border Stripe, Miss Laura Sprague; Trap, Henry Frost; Big Tip, Jack Skinner; Ghandi, Mrs. J. F. Bouvier; Prophet, Flying Horse Farm, and Straide Gift, Richard K. Mellon.

Classes and Awards.

Three classes will be shown on Saturday, the first at 1 p. m.

Awards will be the Master's Plate, for hunters owned and ridden by members of the Middleburg Hunt, presented by D. C. Sands, M. F. H.; the Master's Plate, for pairs of hunters, plate to be presented by Miss Charlotte Noland, M. F. H., and the Virginia Plate, for hunters owned and ridden by members of or subscribers to an organized hunt, presented by the Middleburg Hunt.

Judges for the trials include Col. George, commanding officer of Fort Myer, Va.; Dion Kerr, Washington, and Courtland H. Smith, The Plains.

Gate admissions will be given to the Middleburg Community League.

Miss Gwynn Weds Mr. Turnure Today

Ceremony in New York Quiet Affair.

The marriage of Miss Louise Harrison Gwynn, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William C. Gwynn, to Mr. Lawrence Turnure, of New York, will take place this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in New York, at the residence of Dr. Percy Turnure, uncle of the groom, in the presence of members of the immediate families only, owing to the recent death of Mr. Turnure's father. The bride will be unattended.

Miss Gwynn, after her graduation from Holton Arms School, traveled abroad for a year, returning to make her debut two years ago in Washington, Philadelphia, and in Baltimore at the first bachelor's cotillon.

The bride will wear a gown of white satin with veil and rose point lace and will carry a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley. Her going-away suit is of light green homespun, trimmed with caracul and accessories of brown.

After a honeymoon in the South, Mr. and Mrs. Tenure will live in New York.

Doorbell Will Go Unanswered While Hosts Take Time Out

Harried Through Four Seasons of Surprise Visits, Couple Plans Strategic Retreat to a Hotel—There to Recuperate and See the Town.

By Evelyn Voss Wise.

Cherry blossom time in Washington, that glorious two or three weeks when the Tidal Basin is transformed into a vision of lacy pink blossoms against lucid blue sky and dark waters, will soon be here. I have lived in Washington four years, but have never seen the real beauty of those trees . . . and all because of friends of friends . . . or relatives. But this year I shall see them.

I came to Washington from the Middle West, and at some time or other, I have learned, every one from Kansas to northern Minnesota visits the Nation's Capital, and strangely enough, each one seems to have known me in college, or have heard of me through a friend, or through a friend of a friend of mine.

My husband and I and our two children live in a small apartment. Unfortunately, we possess both a car and a davenport, a davenport that is long enough and wide enough for sleeping purposes . . . at least, so I have often been told.

I missed the inauguration . . . the only one I might have seen . . . because of visitors. The evening before a family we scarcely knew called on us. Could we manage to keep them, just for two nights?

I explained that we had very little room and suggested an inexpensive hotel.

"Hotel?" The head of the family gasped. "We wrote weeks ago about a hotel. Have you heard the prices they are asking?"

Inauguration Blues.

There was nothing that could be done about it. I had given my part-time maid the day off so that she might see the ceremonies . . . Well . . . perhaps I could manage to leave anyway for an hour or two. But next morning, immediately after breakfast, my guests hurried away. I looked at the apartment in dismay. Suitcases lay opened all over the floors . . . the white bathroom was a sickly gray . . . the sink in the kitchen was piled with dishes. Toward noon I turned on the radio, but in the mad scramble from kitchen to bedroom, I caught only bits of sentences, just enough to be exasperating. I turned it off in disgust. At 6 o'clock, when the last of the housework was over, they returned, drenched to the skin but happy.

Without warning, the next group arrived. Distant cousins, they were . . . so distant that we had never heard of them. The mother and her two sons arrived en masse with much baggage, on a Friday evening to spend the week-end. With trepidation, thinking of my one veal cutlet which must be stretched out to serve seven people, and wondering what I had in tins, I invited them to dinner.

"Of course, we're going to stay," Mrs. Smith said. "We wouldn't think of going anywhere else, but now don't fuss one bit. We're just family, you know." She smiled warmly.

The Unpresuming Guests.

I made my way to the kitchen. By breading the cutlet, then hammering it out, it would look bigger. I prepared a tomato sauce to serve with it, baked large potatoes, mixed a salad, and opened a can of string beans to supplement the fresh beans I had. Quite a presentable dinner, I thought proudly, for three unexpected guests, one woman, and two boys, 18 and 20.

My husband, with a guilty look, followed me to the kitchen. They were his relatives.

"You'll have to tell them we haven't room," I whispered.

"What shall I say?" He looked desperate.

Mrs. Smith appeared in the doorway.

"How nice to have twin beds in the children's room. You can put the little girls in one and Bill and Jerry can have the other. They won't mind for just a couple of nights. I can sleep on the davenport."

It was settled.

Dinner was finally served. The boys leaned back, rocking on my antique chairs.

No Vegetables, Thanks!

"Won't you fall?" I asked hesitantly, when I could bear it no longer.

"Oh, no." They continued to rock.

"The chairs might break," I ventured.

"Heck, no. We always sit like this at home."

The veal had disappeared, but the salad was untouched.

"Won't you have salad?" I asked.

"The boys don't care for vegetables," Mrs. Smith beamed. "They like meat. Seems I never can get enough of it for them."

In the morning they asked me to suggest sight-seeing places.

"There is a beautiful statue in Rock Creek Cemetery," I began. Saint Gaudens did it, and Galsworthy is said to have remarked it was the finest bit of statuary in the United States."

"Cemetery?" The scornful eyes of the boys were on me. "Heck! We have a cemetery in Clearwater."

"But . . ." I did not want to see it again, myself.

Now, About Monuments——

"Oh, yes," Mrs. Smith interrupted, "we have some of the best monuments in the State . . . angels and lambs . . ."

"Monument? I want to climb the Monument steps. There are 898 steps," Jerry spoke eagerly.

I knew that very well . . . I had been up and down countless times with visitors.

"Isn't there some way we can shake hands with the President?" It was Mrs. Smith's turn.

"Y-e-e-s. It will take quite a bit of time . . . you'll have to stand in line . . ."

"We don't mind."

"But you could be seeing. . ."

"We want to do the really important things."

They came back each noon for lunch and late each night for dinner. Saturday evening they dragged in, wet and exhausted.

"You saw the Lincoln Memorial?" I asked.

"No. Some one said Gen. Pershing had gone into the Army and Navy Club and we waited in the rain for an hour and a half to see him come out . . . but he didn't come."

Sunday afternoon finally arrived. Three days of dishes, making beds, straightening up after seven people. But they had a dandy time they assured me, and now that we were acquainted, they would come often.

In the months that followed, no less than 50 people called on us either in person or by telephone. Some invited us out to dinner, some invited themselves here. I received much advice, from how to furnish my home or how to raise my children, to how to hold my husband.

The last influx descended a week ago. They were motoring through, and my grandmother wrote me asking me to entertain them. I called the people with whom they were to spend the night, and invited the six to dinner.

My husband answered their knock at the door. In the dim light of the hall it was difficult to make out just what were the large bundles they were carrying, but in the living room we found they had with them a violin, a mandolin and a cornet, and the mother of the two children carried a great stack of music. I dared not glance at my husband. These came from my side of the family.

The Musical Family.

My husband had thoughtfully mixed cocktails for the hot night. Very charmingly, they refused. They never drank anything stronger than tomato juice. I had none.

After dinner, a dinner with conversation completely dominated by the children, aged 10 and 12, the older one leaped to the piano in the living room.

"Let's begin," he shouted.

"Three thirty-nine, first!"

"I want 423."

"Don't argue, children. We'll play them all."

And they did.

At 9 o'clock my husband closed the windows. It is astounding how much noise can come from the throat of a boy of 12 blowing several hours on a cornet.

At 10 we were mopping our faces, expecting momentarily a call from the management. Only during the moments of disagreement over pages . . . whether Rubinstein's melody in F. or "After the Ball Was Over" should be next . . . did we have time for real breathing.

The Hosts Turn a New Leaf.

"Eleven o'clock! . . . The children should have been in bed an hour ago."

"One more," they begged . . . but their father had already restacked the music.

When the door was closed behind them I glanced at my husband. I had a feeling my face was brilliantly red.

"Never mind, honey, he patted my shoulder. "Every one has them. But this year we are going on a visit."

"How and where," I asked.

"I am determined that we shall see Washington. We'll close the apartment for two days . . . go to a hotel . . . visit Washington ourselves, and see the cherry blossoms."

These Fragments.

By Katherine Smith.

I once brought incense to a shrine
And pointed pleading hands in prayer.
I tasted sacrificial wine
And left my heart in worship there.

But when I raised my hand to draw
My veil aside for view complete,
The idol tottered, fell—I saw
Just shattered fragments at my feet.

Seeing Washington is a problem for housewives who are deluged on week-ends by uninvited guests. Above are some Capital sights that tourists enjoy while their hostesses are chained to cook stoves. Top, the famous cherry blossoms and the St. Gaudens statue, praised by Galsworthy. Center, how one Washington family managed to "see Washington first." Revival Singers Prefer Snappy Gospel Hymns

Evangelical Public Likes Gayety, Says Sunday's Ex-Song Leader.

Sunday schools may be going high-brow and substituting Handel for the rousing religious songs of the jazz age but evangelical song leaders are still inspiring good deeds with "Brighten the Corner Where You Are" and bringing tears to the eyes of penitent sinners with the strains of "The Old Rugged Cross."

Homer Rodeheaver, former song leader for Billy Sunday and matinee idol of women revival-goers for 25 years, yesterday declared that the Gospel hymns have a place in religious work that the more stately church hymns can never fill.

"Rodey's" curly dark hair is turning a little gray at the temples, but his magnetic smile is undimmed and the golden voice which has wooed many a sinner into the fold still has the power to charm.

When Rodeheaver began his evangelical career as song leader for Billy Sunday he had just been graduated from Ohio Wesleyan University, where he had been cheer leader and singer. The pep that had inspired undergraduates to "fight for dear old Wesleyan," was used to inspire sinners to "hold that line against Satan," and under his leadership evangelistic music underwent a complete revolution.

"We had to write songs that would appeal to the man in the street," he explained. "Persons accustomed to hearing gay, snappy tunes weren't interested in solemn church hymns. At first our songs shocked the music lovers. For instance 'Brighten the Corner Where You Are.' They said it was cheap and jazzy and unfitted for worship. But they failed to see that this simple little song reached where their hymns could never reach.

"And there are very few Americans today, however sophisticated, they may be, who have not at some time in their lives sung in lusty chorus, 'Since Jesus Came Into My Heart,' have not found cheer in the simple phrases and tune of 'Every Cloud Will Wear a Rainbow If Your Heart Keeps Right,' or have not thrilled at the promise in the song 'There will be no pain or sorrow in that haven of tomorrow, when they ring the golden bells for you and me.'"

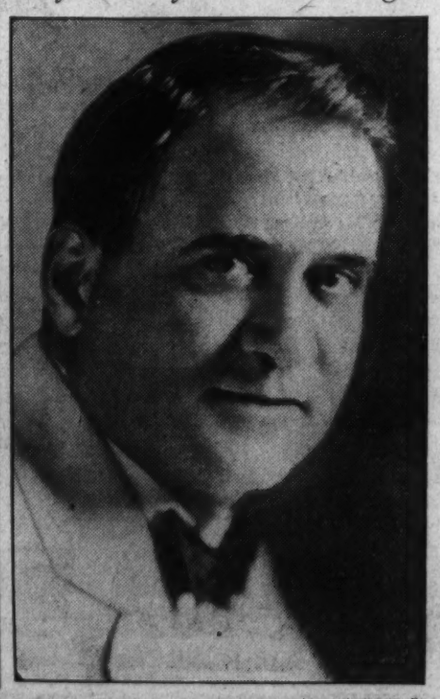
"The Old Rugged Cross," is the most popular song in America today, says Mr. Rodeheaver.

"More records have been sold of that song than any other record ever made," he said.

Mr. Rodeheaver says his ideal in evangelical singing has always been to appeal to the people in the language they can understand.

"And today we are having to make a different approach. The days of the great tabernacle revivals when I led choruses of 5,000 and 6,000 people are gone. We must appeal to the young people in their language. We are constantly writing new songs and bringing our book up to date. Our work must keep up with the times."

Billy Sunday's Former Song Leader Here



Homer Rodehaver, who put gusto into evangelistic singing, believes that the gospel hymn of popular appeal will maintain its place against the influx of highbrow church music.

Post Parade

Rep Shoemaker Gets Poetical to Young Two-Some.

No third person was wanted at a table for two in the taproom of a popular club one night this week. The brunette girl at the table and her tall blond escort were interrupted by a man from a neighboring party who pushed his chair about-face to interfere with the twosome.

"What made it worse was that the fellow kept chattering poetry," the girl said. "But after we saw we couldn't get rid of him we decided the poetry wasn't half bad."

The intruder was none other than Representative Francis H. Shoemaker, of Minnesota. The noted legislator has admitted his flair for poetry, particularly for making parodies. The annoyance he caused the night club couple was due to his recitation of a parody on "The Raven."

The spring urge that comes to every poet will soon be expressed by Representative Shoemaker. He has composed verses on "Garden Seed!" inspired by the annual Congressional custom of mailing seed packets to constituents.

It isn't significant that only Senators are listed with the "Mister" preface in the House Office Building directories, says one of the Capitol police guards.

"I assure you that we'd call the others mister, too, if we had room enough on the card," he said.

But the use of the respectful preface for the Senators seemed important enough to occupy all available space alloted them on the directory, thereby preventing a list of their telephone numbers.

Church Choirs to Sing During Music Week

Hagerstown, Md., March 15 (Spl.).—The presentation of Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise" by the combined choirs of the Zion Reformed, St. John's Lutheran and First Christian Churches will be one of the principal features of music week here, it was announced by the Federation of Music Clubs, sponsors. Music week begins May 6.

Theory False That Marriage Lengthens Life

San Francisco, March 15.—The popular theory that marriage increases longevity has received a setback in a survey made here by Dr. J. C. Geiger, director of public health.

Single men die at the rate of 8.6 per 1,000 and married ones at the rate of 14.8, Dr. Geiger's figures show. The death rate for married women is about twice that for single women.

Widowers die four times faster than husbands, according to the survey, and divorced men are twice as ready victims of the Grim Reaper as those who stay married. Women risk only a slight mortality increase by becoming divorcees, though bona-fide widows die at the rate of 36.9 per 1,000.

Mrs Greenway Tackles Work Enthusiastically

(Associated Press.)

They would notice her. She is a tall, beautiful woman with soft hair, a smile and brilliant blue eyes. But there is more.

"Say," says the elevator boy, who takes her to her office every day, "she never gets on here without two other Representatives. And you know what they're doing? Answering questions; and she can ask them fast—all about different laws."

Mrs. Greenway plunged into her study of law-making so ambitiously that she seems unconscious of the stir she has created here.

She even made up her mind not to speak on the House floor the first ten years. But a later day saw her on her feet making her first speech, ten minutes of forceful talk. The very fact that she did it surprised her.

"I was scared pink when I started," she says, "but I was so convinced I just had to talk."

Veteran observers here know such talks make history. The lawmaker who can not hold his peace because he feels strongly usually "goes places."

Off the record, Mrs. Greenway is "feeling strongly" about something outside her duties right now—it's war talk around the world and women's place in the picture.

"Women give birth to men," she says, "and it seems reasonable they should share the decision when scientific, wholesale, international human slaughter is talked as a means of settling an argument."

Then with a smile:

"You know, I'm just 'fogging through' down here." This "fogging through" is what has intrigued the workmen around the Capitol. It isn't the usual fog. There is nothing indefinite about the way Mrs. Greenway drains dry both books and people for knowledge.

"People say I'm well educated," she says. "I'm not. When I was at school I always felt the open door of human contacts was more important than an open book."

Stories are still abroad about Mrs. Greenway's recent campaign, when she drove, rode and walked to most of the homes in her district, talking to people, seeing how they lived.

One day she stopped by a ditch where men were working. She found that 64 of them had been guests in her home in better years. That put extra determination in her. She came here to do something—and whether "the whole delegation," as she says, did it, Arizona now has a $14,000,000 allotment for the Verde irrigation project, a new postoffice for Phoenix, and a flood control project for Nogales.

Mrs. Greenway now is trying to interest Arizonans in subsistence homesteads and in experiments in growing a plant from which insecticides are made.

Her extreme modesty is forgotten in her interest in the copper mines of Arizona. With a serious, tense look, she says, "Do you know that copper sold at 37 cents after the Civil War, 23 cents after the World War, that 14 cents is a good average, and now they are trying to make 9 cents the normal price?"

'Silent Sentinel' Feminist Fight Here Recalled

Mrs. Kate Stafford's Death Brings Memories of Suffrage Struggle.

The recent death of Mrs. Kate Stafford, 62-year-old social worker and feminist leader, who once went to jail for picketing the White House, has revived memories here of the long fight for woman suffrage.

During 1917 and 1918, when the move for passage of the Nineteenth Amendment was approaching a climax, groups of dauntless feminists patrolled the White House. They stood through snow, sleet, and rain and even when arrested did not give up the struggle. Forty-one women were sentenced to prison, but feminist leaders at once sent in new pickets.

Many leading Washington women were among the group.

"Mrs. Harvey Wiley, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, was the only one who escaped going to prison," Miss Alice Paul, then president of the National Woman's Party, said yesterday. "She appealed, and the higher court decided that it was unlawful to send her to jail. But the others served terms of from 15 to 30 days. I served a seven-months term at one time."

Other Washington women among the "Silent Sentinels" were Miss Mabel Vernon, active member of the National Woman's Party; Mrs. Richard Wainwright, widow of Rear Admiral Wainwright; Mrs. Alice Graham Robertson, Mrs. Gilson Gardner, and Miss Elsie Hill.

"These women all proudly wear, a prison pin, which shows a prison gate," Miss Paul said, "they are proud of their prison careers."

Mrs. Goolrick Speaks On Flower Cultivation

Fredericksburg, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—Flower cultivation was the theme of an address on "Gardening" delivered before the Parent-Teacher Association yesterday by Mrs. W. K. Goolrick.

A committee of Mrs. Ray C. Hopkins, Mrs. W. J. Lacy and Mrs. V. A. Folden was named to obtain minimum rates for dental services to destitute children. The P.-T. A. fund for this purpose will be increased by proceeds from a St. Patrick's supper Friday.

Wanted: Hostess for Hotel Cocktail Room; Must Possess This, That, These and Those

A cocktail hostess has got to have this, them, these and those!

"Which is enough, I guess," said Roland Mumford, youthful manager of the Hamilton Hotel, who is on the lookout for a versatile young person to be official hostess in the newly opened Alexander Room.

Unlike Diogenes of old who, with a lantern in his hand, searched the streets of Athens for an honest man, Mr. Mumford sits at his desk with a very professional air and from out the never-ending line of applicants seeks somebody with lots of what-have-you.

Yesterday Mr. Mumford was still going strong. "Why, of course I'll find her!" he declared.

"You can't tell me there aren't plenty of girls in this city who measure up!"

"No, no, no! I don't use a tape measure!" Mr. Mumford looked guilty. "I don't care if she's 36 this or 5 feet that. I just want somebody who knows her stuff!"

"She's got to have social background so she'll know how to receive people, and make them feel welcome—you know, kind of call up that spot of joy to the cheeks! Bring gladness and cheer to weary hearts!

"Sure, the cocktails can do that, but she can help, can't she?" There seemed to be no argument, so Mr. Mumford continued.

"It'd be a good thing if she'd traveled a lot so she'd know how to meet all kinds of people, know just what to say and do—handle the situation, in other words!

"Situation? Oh, any situation. That is—well, demmit—just say situation.

"You know, if a fellow has one too many she's got to be smart enough to kind of see that he doesn't have any more.

"And if a fellow hasn't had enough she's got to—well, encourage him. Nicely, gently, adroitly. Smoothly, that's it!" Mr. Mumford's enthusiasm gained momentum.

"Naturally to do all this she'll have to be pretty, attractive and charming. She'll have to know what to say, when to say it, what to wear—and how!

"I've been figuring the dress business out and I think one of those pretty afternoon dresses would do from 4 o'clock until dinner time. And then she ought to wear one of those what d'ye call 'ems—sure, cocktail frocks, I guess. Long, and drapy-like. Appealing. Cozy looking. To show the spirit of hospitality." There was spirit in Mr. Mumford's speech. Spirit shown in his eyes.

There came a gentle tapping on the door. Mr. Mumford straightened his tie. "It's a new line," he explained. "And by Jimmmy, I'll find her yet!"

Relief Gardens Planned For West Virginians

Charleston, W. Va., March 15 (Spl.).—State and Federal relief authorities are working out elaborate plans for the establishment of subsistence gardens throughout the State, starting April 1, for the purpose of benefiting 100,000 needy West Virginia families.

The program is being worked out by William N. Boehler, State CWA administrator; Francis W. Turner, State welfare director, and J. O. Knapp, director of the agricultural extension division of West Virginia University. Trained persons are being assigned in each county to aid needy families in planting gardens. Land for the purpose will be obtained through local civic bodies, coal companies and other property owners.

Health Notions Termed Antique

Persons who conscientiously wash out their insides with great quantities of water; sleep in freezing rooms with the windows wide open; painstakingly take deep-breathing exercises every morning, and console themselves for discomfort by thinking that these things will improve their health, are in for a big shock.

For Dr. Warren E. Forsythe, director of the University of Michigan Health Service, has been doing some extensive research into the facts back of old health rules, and he reports that most of them are groundless.

Washing out the interior by drinking large amounts of water is not good for the system, he declares. Given a ready supply, the normal person will drink what he really needs.

"The troubles attributed to auto-intoxication are more mythical than real," he asserts.

"The evils attributed to poorly ventilated rooms, and the idea that this leads to a lack of oxygen and harmful increase in carbon dioxide, are also false, says Dr. Forsythe.

He explains that the essential problem of ventilation is one of heat regulation. The flow of heat from the body determines in part it's comfort and health.

As for deep breathing exercises—they may be very dangerous. Dizziness or actual faint may follow when these are enforced.

Another health idea that Dr. Forsythe exploded was that it is harmful to eat between meals. This is not harmful, if the total amount and quality of food is sufficient.

"That green apples cause stomach aches, is also an erroneous idea, Dr. Forsythe says. These fruits have been blamed for many pains, which were in reality symptoms of appendicitis, or other serious troubles, he asserts.

As for bathing it is more valuable for social and esthetic purposes than for those of health, according to Dr. Forsythe, and good posture is a result of good health rather than a cause of it.

Vitamin D Used In Rejuvenating Beauty Cream

By Ruth Anne Davis.

There was only one beauty treatment admitted to the basic science division of the Hall of Science at the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago last summer. It was a face cream carrying the sunshine vitamin D.

Credit for its discovery goes to a Boston doctor who burnt his hands severely while doing X-ray work. The burns became irritating and painful to such an extent that the doctor determined he would find some kind of ointment to relieve his suffering.

As the vitamin D had long been known to science as one vitamin essential to skin health, it was with this he started experimenting. At that time no harnessing substance had been found for this vitamin.

His experiments entailed many trials and errors. At times it seemed an impossible task. But he continued with determination, and finally achieved success by harnessing the vitamin in some sort of fatty substance.

Beauty experts, and dermatologists the country over immediately became interested. After the doctor's discovery they knew it would be a simple matter to embody this "sunshine" into a cosmetic. A smooth, skin-soothing ingredient was selected, and subtly perfumed to the most fastidious woman's fancy.

Keep in mind that youth does not vanish in a day, and neither can it be restored in a day. No cream or lotion can perform actual miracles, but preparations which do contain health giving properties can, with regular usage, preserve and promote the youthful freshness of skin.

Waterproof Bags.

Handbags which are proof against the weather are given a hale and hearty welcome by one shopper Davis.

Beautifully designed purses, featuring all the newest "stylisms" have been treated with a certain mysterious chemical. Just as vaccination insures us against smallpox, an inoculation against typhoid, so does this strange chemical assure these bags a long and happy life, free from stains, blotches, and fadings, the usual results of rain, snow and sleet.

They are water-repellant, dust-resistant, and perspiration proof! Come what will these bags are prepared for the worst.

Miles of Yarn.

A wealth of wool, yards of yarn, high fashions in suits, ensembles, sweaters, and hats, new and fascinating things for the home, afghans, rugs, bedspreads, make a delightful display in the new knit shop recently opened in a local shop.

The wonder is that such miracles can be wrought with a pair of needles and some wool—that a stunning suit can actually grow out of a mere ball of yarn. But there they are, suits, dresses and ensembles, dozens of them, some in the making, some finished.

Afghans and spreads, in fantastic color combinations and intricate patterns inspire bored fingers to learn the art of knitting and crocheting.

A demonstrator in the shop gives free lessons to amateur knitters, teaches them how to make anything from sweaters to bedspreads.

There's going to be big going-ons in the shop today. From 11:30 to 12:30 in the morning, and from 4:30 to 5:30 in the afternoon there will be an informal showing of spring fashions in hand-knit wear. It will be an occasion ripe with new ideas, just the time to make plans for what your new knit suit should be like.

To Dress Up Black,

A plain black dress is often too severe to be worn without some kind of color relief. The little white organdy flowers on sale in an F street shop are small, dainty, and quite appropriate for relieving the severity, adding a coy touch, and an extra portion of style. They're 32 cents.

To Cut or Not.

Dear Miss Davis: I am a brunette with long, almost black hair. People are constantly nagging me to bob it. They say that long hair is definitely passe. Do you thing it is? SUE.

Dear Sue: Long hair is never passe if it is nicely kept and becomingly arranged. Study your type. If you are convinced that bobbing your hair would not improve your appearance, by all means let it remain long.

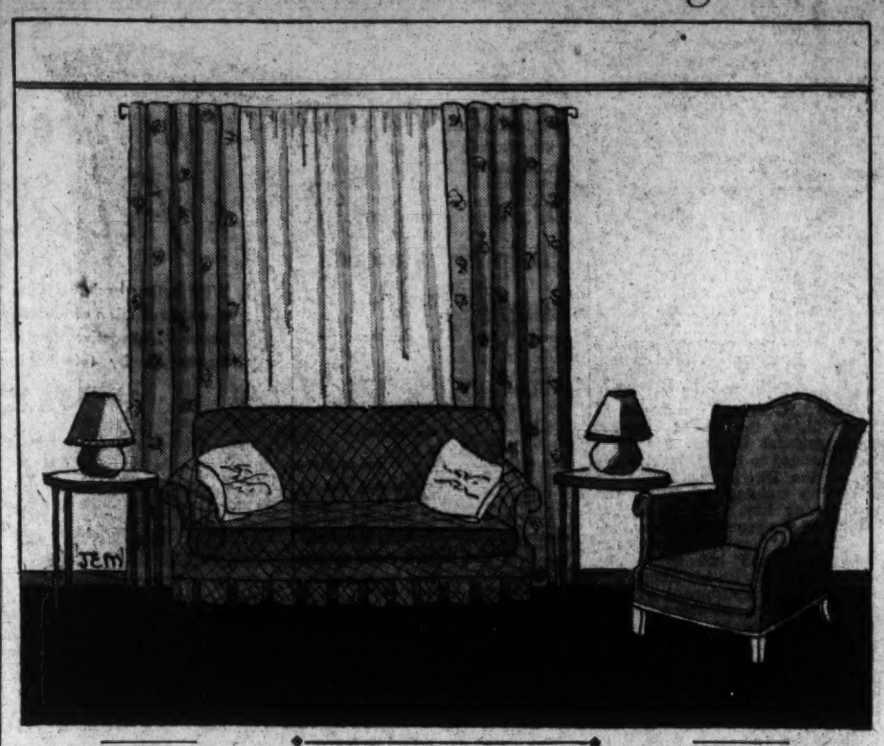
Gay Color, Carefully Used, Will Revivify The Most Monotonous of Living Rooms



For Northern Exposures and Little Sunlight, a Rose Motif.

By Jo Ellen Maxson.

A dash of color in the spring of the year pulls a room out of humdrum monotony and gives it new sparkle. Clear understanding of color is of utmost importance in the decoration of any home whether it is large or small, luxurious or simple.

The two color schemes offered today are for the same living room. The first is for a northern exposure with little sunlight. The second is for a southern exposure which calls for cool, restful colors.

Windows—Glass curtains of cream cotton net. Draperies, straight-hanging, are of nubby, ribbed cotton in old rose flecked in beige and cream.

Furniture: Sofa upholstered in rough-textured rose material in a simple diagonal weave. It is flanked by walnut end tables which hold lamps with bases of bright Italian pottery in cream, blue, yellow and terra cotta. The shades are of ivory parchment. An arm chair is covered in glazed chintz in a gay field flower pattern of rose, blue and yellow on a cream background. A wing fireside chair is upholstered in beige hand-woven material and piped and welted in chocolate brown.

Woodwork: White.

For Southern Exposures Cool, Restful Tones Are Used.

Furniture: Sofa upholstered in blue-green chintz with a small diamond pattern in white and plum. It is flanked by pine end tables with lamps of white pottery and white shades bound in plum. An arm chair is slip-covered in plum with white weltings. A second lounging chair is upholstered in emerald green in an interesting coarsely-woven material.

Bicycle Helped Romance Back In Naughty 90s

Bicycle Club Reminisces to That Effect at Recent Reunion.

Those who think that the automobile has been Cupid's chief aid in the machine age are all wrong. The bicycle back in the 90s gave romance its big impetus.

Proof to this effect was presented at a reunion this week of the Chain and Sprocket Club, a bicycle club founded by a group of boys in 1896. Of the 25 present members of the club, 18 married girls they met during their bicycle rides in the 90s.

The reunion was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Jerman, 111 Shadow road, Kenwood, Chevy Chase, Md. Mr Jerman is a fromer president and also a former captain of the club. Members and their wives attended the event in the costumes of 1902, including shoes with tootpick toes, chatelaine watches, opera hats, wing-tipped collars and pompadours.

First prize for women's costume was awarded Mrs. Calvin T. Milans, who wore her mother's wedding gown. Her hair was dressed in Gibson girl fashion. The second prize was awarded Mrs. Z. D. Blackistone, who wore a white lingerie dress with black velvet hat. Her costume also included a feather boa and a complete set of ruffled, lace-trimmed underwear of the period.

Robert McP. Milans, winner of the men's first prize, was attired in the evening dress of the period, including Ascot tie, opera hat, narrow trousers and an artificial mustache. Frank H. Jones won the second men's prize with a Prince Albert, full skirted, a silk hat and a mustache.

The guests included Dr. and Mrs. Peter B. Bain, Dr. and Mrs. Seneca Bain, Mr. and Mrs. Z. D. Blackistone, Mr. and Mrs. Royal E. Burnham, Mr. Horace Chandlee, Dr. Howard Cobey, Dr. and Mrs. D. G. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Henry T. Glover, Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Hutchison, Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. T. Edwin Lawton, Mr. and Mrs. William Linkins, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Milans, Mrs. Calvin T. Milans, Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Milans, Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Milans and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Van Sant.

What Today Means

"Pisces."

If March 16 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 6:30 to 7:30 a. m., from 9:30 to 10:30 a. m. and from 3:30 to 4:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 11:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 1:30 to 2:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 8:30 p. m.

If March 16 is your birthday, you fully appreciate the importance of accuracy in the business affairs of life. This trait will prove of great value, not only in commercial dealings but home management as well. It is advisable, however, not to carry preciseness to an extreme. We sometimes may err by being too demanding in exacting a detailed explanation of small expenditures from those who have a right to expect us to have confidence in their judgment. Nothing is more discouraging to a trustworthy person than to feel that there is a doubt existing as to their responsibility. It is advisable to avoid creating such a situation.

The child born on March 16, as soon as it is old enough to comprehend, must be taught the importance of moderation, especially in eating. It should be warned of the evils of gluttony. Children should learn to be food conscious, by teaching them not to gobble down their food, and that they will by eating slowly appreciate its flavor through their sense of taste. This not only will make their meals enjoyable, but assure the proper digestion.

People born on March 16 will be happier, and more contented, in their own home surroundings regardless of how small or humble it may be than if they lived in hotels or shared a home with some one else.

Beggars All By Katharine Newlin Burt

Two of the house men were waiting for him in the hall. They reported that the parley was still in progress. As for the people in the living room, Miss Kendall had kept them in bounds. They had had plans of their own—to go out, to threaten, to bribe, to make a bonfire as a signal on the beach in order to bring help from Chetteraw. But so far they had been dissuaded. Miss Kendall had told them that very soon now the men demanded would be either surrendered or sent safely away.

Rafe Writes Notes.

Rafe asked for pencil and paper and wrote two notes, one to Tine and the other, inclosing the marriage license, to his wife. He gave the notes to one of the men to deliver, "in case he did not get back."

Then, setting his teeth against his own bodily pain and weakness, he helped to raise the half-conscious weight of Madrone from the settle. As carefully as possible they started down the cellar steps. Twice Rafe had to stop to rest and get his breath. The man they carried breathed in gasping agony. They got him to the boat at last and laid him down.

"You want me to come to help row?" asked one of the young Italians.

"No. This is our risk, Madrone's and mine. With us well off the island, the rest of you should soon be safe. No use exposing any other lives than our own. Listen, now. As soon as we've get our start—and give us as long as possible—but when those fellows outside there begin to get restive and to suspect that we are not going to be handed out to them, let them know we're off. That'll save the house from a looting. They'll scatter out on the water to get us. That's what they're after, the finish of Madrone and the assurance that my mouth is shut. See? Don't forget—if I don't get back—to let Miss Kendall have my letter. And Miss Dare. Go back now and tell Rondo that we're off."

He let himself down and took up the oars. His side hurt him as he rowed. Over his shoulder he could see the lights of Chetteraw. They looked desperately remote, indifferent. He knew that against them any seeker might make out the silhouette of his own moving head and shoulders. If he were stronger, he might make speed, but all he could hope for now was an inchworm's progress. He studied the lights in order to determine the point where the restaurant hung over the harbor, and, setting for himself one of Candle Island's gable windows as a signpost, he kept his eyes upon its luminous square as he rowed. Now and then he looked down at the vague darkness of Madrone's body. He could hear its labored breath and the uneasy movements of his pain. Presently as they moved out from the shelter of the trees a voice rose from the tragic shadow at his feet.

"You are the son of Boniface Courvoisier?" it said.

"I am," said Rafe.

"And you are now the husband of that young Northern lady?"

"I am, indeed, Madrone." His heart grew stronger.

"Then," the man rose a trifle, "then you, the son of Boniface, so proud and scornful a young gentleman, have married the daughter of an immigrant, of a bootlegger, a gunman—the daughter of me, Nino Madrone."

Chapter XXX.

What Madrone expected—an oath, an outcry, or a blow, death maybe—Rafe could not think, but certainly not in a slow and gentle voice, "I have known that for two days, Madrone."

"You—have—known?"

"Down there in my cabin, after I'd been speaking to Hortense the day you hid there, when wou came out from the bedroom, moved close to tears, I saw the likeness. And then, already I had heard your history. I knew the story of my father's insult to you, of Rudolph Crewe's treatment of your wife. You had thought yourself a murderer, you had fled, and in Chicago maybe, somewhere, you had fallen in with other desperate men who taught you a racket." I know why you spared my life when you heard my name back in your swamp city.

"You are a reader of 'Monte Cristo,' aren't you? It was a Monte Cristo plot. You kept your daughter in ignorance of her parentage, shipped her off with your wife under another name to the care of your Italian relatives. You sent this girl to Chetteraw, and bought for her Courvoisier's Candle Island. You had planned her conquest of the city that had despised you, insulted your wife, thrown you out, causing your ruin.

"It was a good scheme, in a way. Fantastic, but not impossible. Your daughter had beauty besides her wealth. And to give your fantasy substance, luck put into your hands Rafe Courvoisier, the son of Boniface. You made him your peon. He would get this girl introduced to his city. The sudden wish of Hortense to marry Randal Crewe was an accident, surprising and it must have seemed to you an answer to prayer. It brought you down here in a hurry, you and Jay. God had simply handed over to you the son of your worst enemy. You had his property, his honor, everything. All you had to do to bring down upon him all the shame and insult you had once suffered was to gather a group of his friends together and publicly throw him over. Well, as far as it goes, that was successful. Randal has got his lashing. But I think he has not lost everything. He has still friends and at least one faithful lover. As for the son of Boniface Courvoisier—believe me, Madrone, I love your daughter.

Thanks for Vengeance.

"The only reason I had not asked her long ago was because I thought myself dishonored and your tool. As soon as I knew that the poor child was more your victim than I have been, when I knew that my poor name and place could shelter her, all that doubt of mine was over. I am not proud of her inheritance. But I am proud of her. She will make a great Courvoisier." His voice broke. "By heavens, Madrone, I must thank you for your vengeance."

He was silent and lifted his eyes again to Candle Island's lights.

Scout Troops Exhibit Crafts During Week

Exhibits of Girl Scout work will be shown on the fourth floor of Woodward & Lothrop's store, this afternoon, from 4 until 5:30 o'clock. Girls from Troops 20, 35, 71, 78, 59 and 42 will demonstrate Scout crafts.

A similar demonstration will be held at the same time today, on the fourth floor of Julius Garfinckel & Co. Girls of Troop 18 will demonstrate one form of community service. Girls from Troop 51, will do home-nurse activities under the direction of Mrs. Charlotte Biers, R. N., the captain of that troop. Others from Troops 43, 3, 98, 83, 82 and 42 will be mending, making marionettes, bamboo flutes, weaving and doing lead craft.

Girl Scouts will broadcast a birthday program over Station WMAL at 11:30 o'clock Saturday morning.

Capital Kitchen

By Susan Mills.

There is a time and place for heavily spiced foods, for delicately flavored foods, or for the breath-taking dainties that take a long time to prepare and a moment to eat. But sometimes the appetite wearies of fancy things; then there is a charm in the old-fashioned simplicity that makes the most of ordinary ingredients.

Some of grandmother's methods may be a little out-dated, yet others are still popular with modern, sophisticated tastes. Take, for instance, her delicious beefsteak pot pie and the New England boiled dinner. Both of these dishes are a hearty meal in themselves; when served with a green salad and a simple dessert, the result is a menu that is balanced and satisfying.

Beefsteak Pie.

2 pounds round or chuck steak
1 large onion, sliced
2 tablespoons lard
2 cups diced potatoes
1 egg
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
Rich pastry or biscuit dough

Cut the steak into small pieces and brown them, together with the sliced onion, in hot lard. Season with salt and pepper. Cover with hot water and simmer for 30 minutes. Then add the diced potatoes and cook about 45 minutes longer, or until the potatoes are done.

Thicken with flour and butter creamed together. Pour into a deep dish, cool slightly, and cover with a thin crust of biscuit dough or pie crust and bake in a moderately hot oven (400 degress F.) until the biscuit dough or pie crust is nicely browned.

Vegetables such as carrots or turnips are sometimes added to the beefsteak pie.

New England Boiled Dinner.

3 or 4 pounds corned beef
1 small head cabbage
3 large carrots
6 medium onions
6 small parsnips
6 medium potatoes
2 small turnips

Wash the meat in cold water. If very salty, soak it for half an hour in cold water, or let it simmer for a few minutes in water and then drain. Place the meat in a kettle (a large iron kettle is the kind that grandmother used).

Cover it with boiling water, and let itsimmer until tender, three or four hours. During the last 45 minutes of cooking, add the carrots, onions, parsnips, potatoes and turnips. During the last 20 minutes of cooking, add the head of cabbage, cut in quarters. Serve attractively arranged on a large platter, with the corned beef in the center, and the vegetables in separate piles around it.

Anklet Socks Leave the Sports Field

By Amos Parrish.

New York, March 15.—A lot of men in this country believe they're entitled to more comfortable ankles. Which accounts for the fact that for several years many of them have been wearing anklets with their tennis and golf slacks.

Naturally, business friends of these anklet-wearers spotted them. What's more, they found that anklets had all that was claimed for them . . . including lightness on the feet, comfort on the calf, the shin, the ankle, the foot. Cool. Airy. Easy on and easy off.

The result of all this is the newer, darker, 1934 editions of anklets for wearing to business.

There are two preferred types of anklets. There's the short length sock with turnover cuff . . . the cuffs knit just tight enough to make them stand up and hold the ankle without wilting.

And there's the anklet that has no cuff but instead has several strands of two-way-stretch rubber threads woven right in at the top. This does its gripping job thoroughly—without binding your ankle or strangling your circulation. In fact, you're not conscious of it.

Wool versions of the first type of anklet we mentioned (with the turn-down cuff) have been worn for sports. But you can get them now in lisle, in silk and in synthetic silk.

If you're a 6-and-3 rib wearer (as hundreds of thousands of men are) you can get your cuff anklets in wool or lisle. If you like clocks or stripes or other neat-patterned effects better, you can have yours either silk or lisle.

(Copyright, 1934.)

Socks of the type described are available in Washington in all the better shops and department stores.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Genetics in Europe.

There is a definite tendency all over Europe and, in some, measure, over North America, to add genetics to health programs. The present political program in Germany grew out of the German Youth Movement, and one of the features of that wave was better physical development. When that movement had blossomed into the present political control we began to hear of the improvement of the racial stock by various genetic procedures, as well as by mass athletics, and out-of-door life.

Just now the world is somewhat agast at a proposal to sterilize a half million or more people, so as to prevent them from contributing to the German racial stock. This negative eugenics measure is paralleled by others that are classed as positive eugenics procedures. The objective is to build a better racial stock parallel with the building up of a new economic structure. In Germany, education may be going down but health is coming up.

Mussolini is having much to say about intimate affairs of the Italian people. We read of prizes for large families, and medals for mothers who have borne many children. He appears to be more interested in quantity rather than in quality. The Italian birth rate is falling. In many cities it is lower than the death rate. Mussolini is keeping books on these cities and on his entire country. He is said to be determined to make them balance more than one budget. If his genetics program covers quality in addition to quantity the news has not stressed the fact.

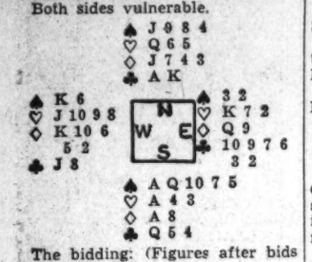
A Good Guess or Sound Technique.

If, when one is making a game contract, a line of play is found which definitely increases the Declarer's chances of fulfilling this contract, even though it practically gives up any chance of making an overtrick, this line of play should invariably be adopted in Rubber Bridge. The loss of 30 or even more points is negligible when compared with the value of a game.

On today's hand Mr. Al Sobel, of New York City, was able to fulfill a four-spades contract by making a very fine decision as to opponents' distribution and then following this decision by the only line of play which would counteract the bad lay of the cards.

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	3♠(1)	Pass
4♠(2)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—Not a particularly good three-spade bid, but the North hand is too strong for a bid of only two.

2—The four-spade response is automatic.

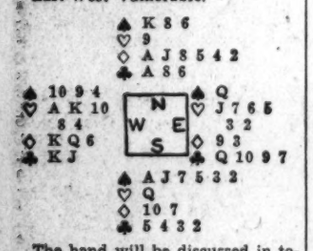
West made the best Opening lead, the heart Knave, and Declarer played the Queen from Dummy, hoping that the lead was the top of an intermediate sequence. East, of course, played the King, and Mr. Sobel now realized that if the spade finesse lost, fulfillment of the contract depended upon his ability to get a heart discard in Dummy on the Queen of clubs in his hand. Accordingly, the Ace and King of clubs were led, and when West dropped the Knave on the second round, Mr. Sobel correctly decided that that was not a false-card. He then made the only play possible to make the hand. The Knave of spades was played from Dummy, and when it was not covered, South went up with the Ace in his own hand and then played out his club Queen. Just as South had hoped, the King of trumps was alone in the West hand, and when West trumped with the King, a losing heart was discarded from Dummy. Had the spade finesse been taken, South would have gone down one, as one diamond trick must be lost in any event.

It is granted that had West held two little spades and East two to the King, Mr. Sobel's play would have been the only way of losing the contract, but the percentages definitely favored the play actually made, as it could not be a losing one except in the instance named.

Tomorrow's Hand.

Defending against a four-spade contract by South, after the heart King holds, what is West's best defense and how can the Declarer still fulfill the contract on the hand below?

West, Dealer.
East-West vulnerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

CHEVROLET

THERE IS A CHEVROLET DEALER NEAR YOU TO SERVE YOU

CHEVROLET factories are breaking records, trying to give America all the cars it wants. 4000 units a day are rolling off the assembly lines. February output was twice that of January. March output, according to present indications, will be three times that of January. More Chevrolets are now being produced than any other make of automobile in the world. And today, Chevrolet is happy to report that all its dealers will soon be in a position to make immediate deliveries.

When you consider how short a time the new Chevrolet has been in production—when you consider, also, that the 1934 car is not last year's model improved, but a basically new automobile, with sweeping changes in design—this production record becomes somewhat of an accomplishment. But, a still greater accomplishment, in our opinion, is the way that these cars have all been produced!

Despite continued nationwide pressure for more and more volume, Chevrolet has been careful never to lose sight of its basic aim: to build the most motor cars, by building the best cars at low price. To that end, speed in production has been tempered with care and precision. Quantity has gone hand in hand with quality. Chevrolet's famous standards have been rigidly held to, in every factory operation. The result: When you place your order for a new Chevrolet, you'll not only get a big, rugged "Knee-Action" car—with the newest thrills of motoring—you're also assured of getting a typical Chevrolet car in economy, dependability and long life.

Liquor Sales In Hospital Zones Barred

St. Elizabeths Section Will Be Center of Dry Radius.

Alcohol Board to Take Up Licenses Near Schools Soon.

A dry area extending half a mile from St. Elizabeth's Hospital was ordered yesterday by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board at the request of officials of the institution. Under the order no alcoholic beverages may be sold within the area.

This dry area was established by act of Congress in 1907, but the passage of the liquor law nullified the earlier prohibition and business establishments in the vicinity of the hospital were eligible for permits until promulgation of the prohibitive order by the board.

Tomorrow the board will begin consideration of applications for licenses in the vicinity of schools. These cases were held in abeyance pending formulation of a policy by the board, which has declared no licenses will be issued within 400 feet of a school unless the applicant is able to show that the issuance of a license would be "appropriate."

The cases which will be heard tomorrow are Market Pharmacy, 1430 Seventh street northwest, which is near the Polk School; Harry S. Gildenhorn, seeking license for his store at 4400 Georgia avenue. This place is near the McFarland Junior High School.

Applications for licenses in the vicinity of Walter Reed Hospital, except for light wines and beer, will be refused, Chairman George W. Offutt announced yesterday. This policy was adopted at the request of the commandant of the post.

Previously the board had declared that no licenses would be granted within two blocks of the Soldiers' Home, except for light wines and beer.

The first "Class F" license, for light wines and beer dispensed on special occasions such as banquets and picnics, was granted yesterday to the German Theater Club, which is giving an entertainment Sunday night at the Knights of Columbus Hall.

Freehold Test Exhausts Panel

New Veniremen Called to Try Property Owner's Claim on County.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 15 (Spl.).—So few members of the original panel of veniremen turned out to be property owners yesterday in Berkeley County Circuit Court here that a new panel was called.

Counsel for the County Court, in an action against it for damages due to the construction of a new State Highway between Inwood and Charles Town, demanded that the freeholder test be applied, and only 11 out of 30-odd veniremen proved satisfactory. Sixty names had to be drawn before the list was completed. The trial was delayed a day because of the complication.

The suit was filed by Roy Swartz, owner of the property. No land was taken from him, but the route of the old road was changed so his property is now farther back from the new highway. He contends this has done him damage.

The outcome of this suit will be watched by many, as there has been no change in State road laws, counties being financially responsible for damage by changes in State roads.

Fredericksburg Police Install Radio Service

Fredericksburg, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—A short-wave radio set was installed at the city's expense in police headquarters here yesterday, although the city council some months ago turned down an offer of the Washington Police Department to install a set here at no expense to the city.

The new equipment will assist local police in attempts to intercept criminals for authorities in Washington and Richmond.

Sons of Florendale Lous Beau Ruled Best in Virginia Trials.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—Two untried sons of a famous sire won first and second trophies at the annual spring puppy trials of the Rappahannock Amateur Field Association, which were run today on the estate of Herman C. Swanson, near Massaponax.

Star Poise, owned by Capt. R. H. Clemmer, of Waynesboro, Va., and Equity, owned by V. L. Hawse, of Staunton, and run by Capt. Clemmer, from the same litter of Mr. Hawse's Florendale Lous Beau, great Virginia and Maryland field trial winner, took the first two places.

Kent Proctor, owned by Leigh Bonsall, jr., of Baltimore, was third, while Emmett R. Colbert's Bens Steve won the special junior puppy stake for dogs whelped after May 1, 1933.

G. D. Richardson, of Weedonville, one of the foremost dog fanciers of this section, was elected president of the Rappahannock Field Trial Association at its annual meeting last night. Other officers chosen include C. B. Carmichael, of Fredericksburg, first vice president; J. W. Dorsey Cooke, Potomac Beach, second vice president; Lloyd L. Stevens, of Quantico, third vice president, and Leo V. Timberlake, of Fredericksburg, secretary-treasurer.

The new board of directors will comprise Emmett R. Colbert, W. Marshall King, Jesse L. Burgess, Herman O. Swanson, and J. Garnett King, jr. The Dixie stake event will be cut from the 1934 fall trials, reducing the program to two events. It was said that the three event program often require three days, a length of time which forbids many sportsmen from entering the competition.

Entries in the 11 braces, judged by Thomas E. Hunt, of Baltimore, and Charles Forrer, of Harrisburg, Pa., included: First brace—Alleghany Jake, owned by R. S. Clemmer, Waynesboro, and Gentlemans Ginger Kid, owned by G. D. Richarson, Weedonville; second brace—Misty's Mist, owned by A. W. Valentine, Richmond, and Hawks June, owned by F. Sitterding, Richmond; third brace—Ginger Tony, owned by G. D. Richardson, and Kent Proctor, owned by Leigh Bonsall, jr., Baltimore; fourth brace—Hawks Mayfly, owned by G. D. Richardson, and Hawks Silver Queen, owned by R. W. Baer, Frederick Md.; fifth brace—Ben Stone, jr., owned by Emmett R. Colbert, Fredericksburg, and Investigator, F. Sitterding, Richmond; sixth brace—Equity, owned by V. L. Hawse, Staunton, and Col. Ben Stone's Buddy, owned by Mrs. E. M. Curtis, Fredericksburg; seventh brace—Hawks Silver Arrow, owned by R. W. Baer, Frederick, Md., and Portsmouth's Jake, owned by Dr. J. W. Abbott, Portsmouth, eighth brace—Star Poise, owned by R. H. Clemmer, Waynesboro, and Japniata Jill, owned by Leroy Pennypacker, Harrisburg, Pa.; ninth brace—Haw Branch Jake, owned by F. Sitterding, Richmond, and Uncle Hugo, owned by Allen W. Valentine, Richmond; tenth brace—Spots Belle, owned by F. Sitterding, and Woodlands Ghost Skeet, owned by J. R. Wingfield, Charlottesville; eleventh brace—Billy Meade, owned by E. C. Meade, Richmond, and Woodlands Ghost Hawk, owned by J. R. Wingfield, Charlottesville.

Rockbridge Reduces CWA Pay Roll to $1,507

Lexington, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—CWA work has been reduced sharply in Rockbridge County, with a pay roll of only $1,507.72 last week.

Twenty-five men are working in two shifts on the Virginia Military Institute gun shed project, and nine are employed on the intake dam. Work will start Friday on the Dutch Hollow road project, with two shifts a week employing 40 men each.

Orchardist Dies At Valley Home

McAllister Kater, 77, Was Frederick Native.

Winchester, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—McAllister Kater, 77, Frederick County nurseryman and orchardist, died at his home here last night.

He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. F. D. Pugh, with whom he made his home here, and by two sons, J. Andrew Kater, of Teaneck, N. J., and J. McA. Kater, of Forest City, Ark. The funeral will be held from the Church of the Sacred Heart.

Dyche Burial Service Held

Postman's Death Fourth in Family Since January 1.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 15 (Spl.).—Rites were conducted here this afternoon for Charles Edward Dyche, 73, one of the original city letter carriers in Martinsburg, who died Tuesday night following a few days' illness. He retired from active postal service 12 years ago, after serving 27 years.

Dyche's death is the fourth in his family since the first of the year. A brother, sister and brother-in-law died, and his wife now is desperately ill.

He was born in Cumberland, Md., a son of the late James B. and Elizabeth A. Dyche. The family came to Martinsburg over 50 years ago.

Surviving are the widow, the former Miss Mary Noile, of Hancock, Md.; two daughters, Elizabeth Ann, pianist and organist, and Mary Ruth; one brother, James B. Dyche, and four sisters, Miss Helen Dyche, Mrs. Edith Turner, Mrs. Thomas W. Martin, all of this city, and Mrs. Clara Walker, of Cumberland.

St. Marys Oratory Award Postponed

Prize Ceremony March 26 to Honor Youth.

Leonardtown, Md., March 15 (Spl.).—The St. Marys Oratorical Society will present the medal and cup awarded for its annual oratorical contest here March 26 instead of on Maryland Day, March 25 which falls on Sunday.

Henry Burroughs, jr., of Captico, a student at the Margaret Brent High School, won the contest January 20 with his essay, "The Significance of the Maryland Tercentenary." He will receive a gold medal while his school will get a silver cup.

Principal speakers at the presentation ceremonies will be Herbert O'Connor, State's attorney of Baltimore, and Dr. Charles Hayden, of here chairman of the oratorical society.

Virginia Power Conference Set

Representatives of Areas Served by Utility to Attend.

Richmond, March 15 (AP).—A conference under the auspices of the Virginia League of Municipalities, attended by representatives of communities served by the Virginia Public Service Co., will be called within a week, it was announced today after a hearing before the State Corporation Commission.

The commission met to consider a report on the company by Allen J. Saville and also heard a lengthy answer to that report by Floyd King, chairman of the board of the utility group.

Representatives of Newport News, Charlottesville, Waynesboro and Arlington County attended.

Mr. Saville's report was the basis of a demand on the part of the Newport News authorities, headed by R. M. Lett, city attorney, that separate rates commensurate with the utility earnings in the Newport News and other areas, be established. Mr. King asserted, however, that the Saville valuation of the company's Newport News properties was too low by approximately $4,000,000 and contended that all the company wished was a fair return on a fair valuation.

High Court Denies Slayer Error Writ

Wise County Man Alleged Killing Was Accident.

Richmond, March 15 (AP).—The Supreme Court of Appeals ruled today that George Bagley, of Wise County, must serve his 25-year sentence for killing James Adams. The Supreme Court refused to grant a writ of error in his case. Adams was shot to death in a church yard after attending services with Bagley. The defense pleaded the shooting was accidental.

Another writ of error was refused to Worley Adams, sentenced to three years on a seduction charge.

G. H. Pearcey was granted a writ on appeal from a verdict of the Roanoke Circuit Court, which set aside a $1,650 verdict for him. He sued the St. Paul and Marine Insurance Co. on an insurance policy, the question being whether property in a store had been destroyed by a fire or an explosion.

Autopsy Planned.

Danville, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—An autopsy will be performed on Lucinda Hairston, colored, who died yesterday from injuries alleged to have been inflicted by Jacob Wilson, colored, a blacksmith, on March 8.

Senate Trio Will Study D. C. Airport

Revision of Usury Bill Forecast and Taxi Meters Debated.

Development of Gravelly Point as a municipal airport was assigned for study to a special sub-committee by the Senate District Committee yesterday.

Senators Glass (Democrat), of Virginia; Carey (Republican), of Wyoming, and King (Democrat), of Utah, comprise the sub-committee, a report from which may be made at another meeting of the full committee next week.

Compulsory liability insurance for owners of private as well as public vehicles was referred to another sub-committee, composed of Senators McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada; Gore (Democrat), of Oklahome, and Kean (Republican), of New Jersey.

Senator McCarran recently introduced a bill requiring liability insurance or bonds for operators of public vehicles in the District; except sightseeing and interstate buses. Return of taxicabs to use of meters was brought into the brief discussion by Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, who said he found general approval of taxicab meters in Baltimore.

D. C. Backs Zone System.

"There has been widespread discussion of the subject of meters and meter rates and the sentiment of the people of the District has been definitely expressed on several occasions," William McK. Clayton, chairman of the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, said. "So far as the people of the District are concerned they are satisfied with the flat rate or zone system now in use."

Revision of the pending bill aimed at usury in the District was forecast in a discussion between committee members and citizens present. Senators Reynolds, Kean and McCarran were named a sub-committee to redraft the measure, incorporating in it a sliding scale which lenders might charge for loans. The scale was outlined but vaguely in the discussion.

Vernon E. West, principal assistant corporation counsel, and William A. Roberts, special assistant corporation counsel, told the committee that the setting up of specific rates might endanger the bill if it were attacked in the courts. Limiting interest and other charges to a "reasonable" level would be adequate for civil purposes but would make it difficult to get convictions in criminal prosecutions, Roberts held.

Loan Probe Asked.

Senator Kean said that if charges were held down to too low a level the lending companies would not lend money.

"The business of these people is to lend money," Senator Reynolds said. "If they find they can't lend money at the high rates they now charge they will lend money at lower rates. I believe that what we need is to enact a law which will permit conviction of usurers. Let us convict a few of them and they will mend their ways."

R. M. Coffman, founder of the Conciliation Bureau, Inc., with offices in the Barrister Building, asked the committee to investigate small loan companies. Mr. Coffman said these companies had thousands of persons of moderate means in their power and offered to produce affidavits of persons who had paid exhorbitant interest and service charges. He proposed that lenders should not be permitted to sell insurance.

Asks Subways at Circle.

Allen Fisher, a delegate to the Federation of Citizens Associations, urged that the zoning law be amended so as to require the zoning commission to give reasons for changes in the zoning of particular properties. H. E. Young, of the Logan-Thomas Circle Citizens Association, urged subways for pedestrians at Thomas Circle. Senator King said the matter should first be taken up with the District Commissioners. The cost might deter the Commissioners, Mr. Young said.

Favorable report on a bill amending the fire escape law so as to ease requirement on small converted apartment houses was delayed at the request of Senator Kean, who said that some fire escape requirements were entirely unreasonable, and added he wanted to study the pending bill.

Favorable report was made on a bill easing charter requirements of the Mutual Fire Insurance Co. of the District, and on a bill to clear the title of land comprising part of the Hohenloe estate.

Round Hill Players Offer Comedy-Drama

Round Hill, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—The Senior Class of the Round Hill High School will present "What Price Ancestors?" a three-act comedy-drama, in the school auditorium tomorrow at 8 p. m.

'Sh-h-h, Mamma; the Police!'

"Mamma, there's a policeman at the door." But this policeman, the little girl in the center found out, wasn't bringing trouble. He was one of the first of the bluecoats to deliver a requisition slip to a needy family under the new relief system. The recipients are Mrs. Mary Pell, of 499 M street southwest, and three of her five children, Barbara, Margaret and Henrietta. The bearer of the glad tidings is Policeman H. W. Beckner.

Bluecoats Bring Relief to Score of Families in Urgent Need.

A city-wide increase of needy cases was reported by emergency relief officials yesterday, as Washington police, under new relief operations, brought aid to more than a score of destitute families.

The slump in CWA activities was held responsible for rising relief rolls. Figures showed 14,000 cases listed February 1. Tabulations now show nearly 16,000 cases on record, officials said.

Meanwhile, local police went ahead with their campaign to bring immediate assistance in urgent cases. After 24 hours, it was reported more than a score of families had been aided.

The Fourth Precinct led with eight applications for relief filed and filled. Each policeman, when a destitute family is known to live on his beat, investigates conditions and authorizes aid.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, announced the new plan was working smoothly. He said the majority of applications have been for food and clothing. Many, however, requested medicines, coal and shoes.

Relief officials said that 18,785 "open cases" are now listed. This, it was pointed out, includes those receiving direct aid, those who have applied and others not determined.

A total of 927 new cases were added to the rolls last week. It wa sestimated that at least three-fourths of the increased cases were due to reduction in CWA operations.

Programs Will Contrast New and Old Harmonies

Shepherdstown, W. Va., March 15 (Spl.).—Popular music of today will be contrasted to music of the past generation in two successive programs to be given by students and faculty of Shepherd State Teachers College.

The students will entertain Wednesday and the faculty a week from Wednesday. A student committee composed of Dan Dutrow, Jane Snyder, and Mary Miller, will direct the new music program. Miss Mabel Hall, dean of women, and Miss Mildred Bartlett compose the faculty committee.

Lorton Inquiry Again Calls On Shoemaker

Probe to Ask Names of Convicts Who Gave Graft Charges.

Representative Shoemaker, whose sensational charges inspired the Lorton Reformatory investigation, will be given another opportunity to furnish the investigating committee with evidence of graft and corruption at the District prison.

W. W. Millan, chairman of the committee, said yesterday that he had asked the Minnesotan to appear at the meeting at 1:30 p. m. today. The committee will call upon Shoemaker for any further charges against the institution.

When Shoemaker testified the first time he refused the committees names of several convicts, paroled prisoners and guards who, he said, had been the sources of his information. It is thought the committee will ask him again for these names.

When the committee adjourned Wednesday, after visiting the institution, it was thought that no more testimony would be taken.

Since that time today's meeting was decided upon and Maj. J. Donovan, District auditor, and Marion C. Hargrove, District purchasing officer, will be called as witnesses to check the testimony of J. E. C. Bischoff, business manager of the prison, it is believed.

In explaining certain accounting and purchasing practices, Bischoff told the committee that the two District officials had given approval.

Virginia Farm Session Told New Deal Aim

O'Neal Praises Roosevelt Policies; Officers Are Chosen by Group.

Harrisonburg, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—A planned and coordinated American agricultural system—not the regimentation of agriculture, but a planned production to remove price-depressing surpluses and an orderly marketing to prevent different sections of the country placing their products at the same time—is the new era coming to the American farmers as a result of the New Deal and the AAA, President Edward A. O'Neal, of the American Farm Bureau Federation, told the annual convention of the Virginia Farm Bureau Federation here today.

"This movement has now started and nothing can stop it," said Mr O'Neal. "The farm organizations of this country, the farm bureau, the farmers union and the grange, are united behind it. In the White House is a man who is sympathetic with it. We shall ask certain amendments to the agricultural adjustment act, which will bring all farmers into the program and provide a penalty for the processor who buys more than the farmer's quota."

Officers of the Virginia Farm Bureau Federation elected are: President, G. F. Holsinger, of McGaheysville; vice president, Nehemiah Kelly of Mount Jackson; directors, C. L. Weast, of Augusta County; D. C. Acker, Rockingham County; Irvine Foltz, Page; H. L. Fishpaw, Frederick; Byrne Downing, Warren; A. H. Willis, Culpeper; S. R. Bowman, Rockingham; G. M. Harnsberger, Rockingham; R. E. Pugh, Rockingham; C. W. Sollenberger, Shenandoah; M. J. Pease, Frederick; C. E. Griffith, Culpeper, and Frank S. Walker, Orange.

The convention adopted a resolution calling for the restoration of price parities between agriculture and industry, uniformity of wages for labor at a level at which the prewar parity of prices of farm products may be reestablished; deprecating the codes of fair competition which prevent the exchange or distribution of commodities between producers and consumers; opposing the ratification of the St. Lawrence Seaway Treaty with Canada, and praising the work and activities of President O'Neal and the State officers.

Police Asked to Hunt West Virginia Man

Huntington, W. Va., March 15 (AP).—City and State police were asked today to search for Charles F. Huddleston, 28, insurance man, who disappeared Monday.

House Group Will Hear of "False Economy" at Session Today.

Officials May Ask Right to Open Incinerator on Same Funds.

The qestion of whether the $300,000 Southeast incinerator shall remain closed during the fiscal year 1935 for reasons which District officials term "false economy" will come before the House District Appropriations sub-committee today.

While the estimates for the refuse department provide continued closing of the incinerator because the Budget Bureau forbade the Commissioners to change the language of the 1934 bill, the committee will reconsider the mandate, it was said.

Sanitary Engineer J. B. Gordon and Engineer Commissioner John C. Gotwals are prepared to testify, if they are asked, that closing of the incinerator has actually effected no savings, but rather has proved a nuisance both to the District Refuse Department and to the residents of Benning, where a burning dump is maintained.

Same Funds to Be Asked.

The District officials are prepared to suggest that the appropriation for refuse disposal be left at the same figure as for 1934, but that the incinerator be opened. If, however, the committee wants the incinerator to handle Federal trash and commercial refuse, the refuse division will need an additional $50,000.

The committee yesterday covered the estimates for four departments, the recorder of deeds, the register of wills, the highway department and electrical division.

The highway estimates, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director, explained, include few specific new paving items, but ask $1,500,000 for street and roadway improvements to be approved by the Budget Bureau, as was done this year. These projects, he said, would serve to relieve unemployment again in 1935 as the highway work did this year.

Money for Bridge Asked.

Total appropriations asked out of the gasoline fund are $2,296,550, as compared to the $1,237,400 contained in the 1934 act.

Among the major items are $375,000 to complete the Calvert Street Bridge; $148,500 to complete the Benning Bridge over the Anacostia River; the repaving of Thirty-first street from the Washington Canal to K street, and South street from Thirty-first street to Wisconsin avenue, and $7,500 to draft plans for a viaduct in line with New Hampshire avenue over the Baltimore & Ohio Railway tracks.

Frostburg Has Exhibit Of Colonial Antiques

Frostburg, Md., March 15 (Spl.).—A display of colonial antiques in celebration of Maryland's Tercentenary opened today at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Carter Chryrock. The affair was sponsored by the Women's Community Club.

In connection with the opening the club held a business meeting and program. Mrs. Sol Abramson was soloist and Prof. T. E. Dorn, of Beall High School, spoke on "Maryland's History."

Brain Fever Kills Baby.

Clifton Forge, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held in the Catholic Church here today for Julia Anne Woodrum, 13-months-old, who died in the hospital here Tuesday with brain fever.

Roberts Divorce Filed.

Reno, Nev., March 15.—Divorce suits filed here today included Florence Harris Roberts against Raymond Bennett Roberts, of Washington, D. C. They were married at Richmond, Va., on June 27, 1916. Cruelty was charged.

Carnera and Baer Agree to Title Fight in New York on June 14

Long Parley Results in Accord

NEW YORK, March 15 (U.P.).—Primo Carnera, the man mountain from Italy, will defend his heavyweight championship against handsome Maxie Baer, of the explosive right hand, lurid loves and unlimited lawsuits in Madison Square Garden's huge outdoor bowl on June 14

This match, current "natural" of the ring, crystalized into an actuality today after nearly nine montns of futile negotiations when James J. Johnston, director of boxing at the Garden, announced that a verbal agreement had been reached.

Drawing Up Contract.

Johnston emphasized that only a verbal agreement had been reached and that no contracts had been signed yet. The attorneys were drawing up the documents and they were expected to be signed before tomorrow by Johnston, Louis Soresi, Carnera's manager, and Ancil Hoffman, Baer's pilot.

Terms of the agreement were not announced. The June date was unexpected, because Carnera's manager had been insisting upon a bout in September. Soresi had planned to sail for South America with the champion on April 22 for a three-month exhibition tour of Argentina, Brazil and Peru. It is not known yet whether there will be any Latin-American tour.

Beat Schmeling in June.

Baer already had established himself as a formidable contender by scoring a technical knockout over Max Schmeling, of Germany, former heavyweight champion, last June 8.

He was the only man given an even chance to bring the crown back to America—because of his size, ruggedness, stamina and punching power. Meanwhile, Carnera met and defeated old Paulino Uzcudun at Rome and little Tommy Loughran at Miami. Both were mismatches and extremely one-sided. This will be Carnera's third title defense.

Baer is in California at Hoffman's Ranch, near Sacramento. He will begin preliminary training soon. He has not had a fight since his victory over Schmeling. He has been appearing in movies, vaudeville and cabarets.

Frederick High Trims Annapolis Five, 33-24

Frederick, Md., March 15 (Spl.).—Frederick High School, County High School League, defeated Annapolis High School, pennant winners of the Anne Arundel County League, in the opening round of the State tournament, 33 to 24.

Annapolis took the lead at the start on goals in quick succession by Bennett and King. Frederick then evened matters on points made by Easton and Nogle. Frederick continued its rally and finished the first period 6 points to the good. Annapolis gained a point in the second period. Frederick went to the fore in the third period and finished 11 points to the good. Staging a comeback in the fourth round, Annapolis pulled up within 4 points of Frederick. On a final rally Frederick scored two field goals and a foul goal.

Big Crash Ahead

MAX BAER.

Charleston's Field Led by Laffoon

CHARLESTON, S. C., March 15 (AP).—Ky Laffoon, young Denver pro, who won the Atlanta Metropolitan Open Sunday with a great finishing round, came through with a fine 68 today as the opening salvo in his bid for the Charleston Tournament of Gardens golf championship.

The 24-year-old Westerner came to the last green late in the afternoon after a party of veteran pros, Harry Cooper, of Chicago, and Craig Wood, of Deal, N. J., had posted earlier 69's. A drive into the rough off the eighteenth tee cost Laffoon a stroke and kept him from scoring even lower. His card had par beaten by three strokes.

Wood had 35—34 for his 69, while Cooper had 36—33. Wood started off with birdies on the first two holes and picked up another on the eighth, but he lost strokes on other holes, and even par was the best he could muster on the out nine. He had birdies on the fourteenth and fifteenth, but dropped a shot on the eighteenth when his approach skipped over the green.

Cooper had two birdies and was over par on two holes on the front side and had a pair of birdies on the second nine, equaling par on the other holes.

Three pros, Mortie Dutra, Detroit; Jack Toomer, Hendersonville, N. C., and Henry Picard, the home pro on the Wappoo course, and an amateur, Alan Smith, of Asheville, were others who had 70s.

A group of nine pros, including Abe Espinosa, Chicago; Al Watrous, Birmingham, Mich.; Wiffy Cox, Brooklyn, and Willie Macfarlane, Tuckahoe, N. Y., were tied at even par 71.

George Christ, Rochester, N. Y., pro, who holed out an explosion shot from a trap off the eleventh hole; Joe Turnesa, Elmsford, N. Y.; Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., and Frank Walsh, Chicago, had 72s.

Stoefen and Mangin in Net Final

Shields Is Outpounded and Loses Match by 6-4, 11-9, 6-4.

Defending Champion in 6-4, 3-6, 6-2, 7-5 Win Over Wood.

NEW YORK, March 15 (U.P.).—Gregory Mangin and Lester Stoefen, two young men who have their sight set on Davis Cup jobs, today gained the final round of the men's National indoor tennis championship in the cavernous Seventh Regiment Armory.

Mangin, defending champion, downed Sidney B. Wood, jr., of New York, one-time Wimbledon titlist, 6—4, 3—6, 6—2, 7—5, while Stoefen dynamited Frank Shields, the country's No. 1 performer, 6—4, 11—9, 6—4.

Mangin and Stoefen will meet Saturday, with victory for Mangin meaning permanent possession of the trophy.

Stoefen and Shields, the two biggest men in international tennis, set out from the start to see which could outslug the other. During the entire course of their match there were not more than three or four rallies in which the ball crossed the net as many as three times in succession. Frank and Lester laid on every ball with every ounce of strength in their giant frames, and when the ball landed inside it was usually good for an outright winner.

Stoefen Holds the Edge.

The service and volley were practically the only shots they used. They came charging in behind every ball, and it was simply a question of which drove his first service ball in oftener, and which could rifle the corners more accurately. Strangely enough it was Stoefen, who stands third to Shields' first in National rankings, and who has had almost no experience indoors, who held the edge.

Standing 6 feet 2½ inches, and with a wing spread like a tri-motored plane, Stoefen was well-nigh invincible once he reached the fore court. Shields tried to pass him on the left and on the right, and when this failed, resorted to the lob, but lobbing over Stoefen is like trying to toss rocks over Everest's summit. The Californian would simply move back a step or two and hammer the daylights out of the ball.

Shields' service, supposedly the mightiest in the game now that Johnny Doeg has turned business man, packed plenty of smoke, but it was a roman candle to a skyrocket compared to the thunderbolts unleashed by the towering Californian.

Stoefen won the first set when he broke Shields' service in the fifth game with two overhead kills that bounded high into the gallery. This break gave him the edge he needed, and he simply concentrated on his own service until he ran out the chapter, 6—4.

Shields Takes Lead.

Shields made his only genuine bid for victory in the eighth game of the second set when two incredible high back hand volleys enabled him to crack Stoefen's service and take a 5—3 lead. Stoefen, however, was gunning for a straight set victory and he came right back to take Shields' service with the loss of but two points, and then hold his own to knot the count.

Games then followed service until the nineteenth when Stoefen brought off a pair of breath-taking passing shots to break through and take the lead at 10-9. This was all he needed, for his own service in the twentieth game was invincible.

Games followed service in the third set until the ninth game when the Californian broke through with a pair of volley placements which caught Shields going away. Shields, hopelessly sunk now, fought back only half-heartedly in the final game.

NORMENT QUARLES, D

Goldstein and Quarles, Former College Rivals, Match Blows Monday Night at Richmond to Settle Issue Long Debated by Fans.

By Bill McCormick.

RICHMOND will witness its most hectic skirmish since the Civil War when Bobby Goldstein starts firing punches at Norment Quarles in the Southland's battle of the century Monday night. The engagement will climax a long, bitter feud between two college boxers under which lies not only intensive personal rivalry, but an ever-present undercurrent of friendly competitive hostility between Virginia and the Carolinas.

Scramble a Carolina team on the gridiron with a Virginia team—and the result probably will be an epic football omelet; toss a Virginia boxer in with a Carolina boxer—and the outcomee probably will be hamburger; unleash Bobby Goldstein, former University of Virginia Southern Conference featherweight champion against Norment Quarles, current North Carolina Conference lightweight diadem-wearer, and anything is likely to happen, and probably will.

The personal rivalry between these two outstanding collegiate contributions to the art of fisticuffing started during Goldstein's last year at college. He encountered Quarles in a dual meet at Chapel Hill and dropped a close, but clear-cut decision to the Tarheel tartar. Since then the boys have been rematched twice, but for one reason or another have never reached the fighting stage.

Hampered by a temporary stomach ailment last week, Goldstein looked particularly unimpressive in workouts here. He was as sluggish as an African anteater full of 3.2 and his timing was as off as a brag-bag wrist watch. A complete rest and treatment for the tummy ache proved just what the doctor ordered and enabled him to bounce back into training this week to whip himself into the finest fighting fettle of his career.

Goldstein, who will weigh in at 130 or less, probably will be topped five pounds or more, but believes the weight difference will react to his adavantage by increasing his natural edge in speed.

Because of a recent Southern Conference ruling, which prohibits boxers in the conference from performing in bouts not participated in by the school team as a whole, Quarles will be forced to forget future college bouts because he accepted this match. When a kid in college gives up the sport in which he excells just to punch at the nose of another kid—that, my friends, is rivalry.

Sword and Gym Contests Top Navy Card

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 15 (Spl.).—Naval Academy swordsmen anticipate with keen interest their match with the New York Fencers Club to be staged here Saturday afternoon, and another big drawing carrd will be the gymnastic contest between Navy and Temple University. Local sport fans will divide their time between the two events, since the local season for basket ball, wrestling and swimming has been completed.

The New York bladesmen are the strongest group in the United States, including among their members a number of National title holders and Olympic representatives. Notable among them are three members of the 1932 Olympic team, Hugh V. Alesandroni. Arthur Murray and Gustave Heiss. George Breed, a fourth entry, was a member of an earlier Olympic group. Seldom have the New Yorkers bowed to college bladesmen.

Middies Unbeaten.

The midshipmen have a strong team this season, being undefeated so far, and are striving to finish the season with a clean record; hence an exciting match is assured Saturday. It is recalled that Midshipman H. H. Kait, senior class, and an outstanding foilsman of this year's team, scored over Mr. Allessandroni last year, 5 to 4.

So far, the Tars have disposed of the Philadelphia Sword Club, Princeton, Columbia, Yale, New York University, Massachusetts Tech. Their only other dual contest will be with University of Penna, March 24, after which they will prep for the intercollegiate finals in New York, March 30 and 31.

The Navy gymnasts also expect their most formidable opposition of the year in meeting Temple. Both teams have completed their preliminary schedules without a reverse.

Temple Gymnasts Good.

Temple's strength is well recognized by Navy, since its team is composed largely of talent from last year's crack freshmen aggregation that performed here. The Temple Frosh will engage the Navy Plebes following the Varsity match.

The only other events to be contested here Saturday will be small bore rifle matches between the Navy Varsity and George Washington and the Navy Plebes, and Western High School of Washington. The Colonial Riflists always give the Middies a tough rub.

Valley Loop Seeks Jamison as Head

Six-Club Circuit Is Likely; Other Officers Named.

Hagerstown, Md., March 15 (Spl.).—If a baseball league is organized in the Cumberland Valley, and everything now points to a six-club circuit this season, J. Vincent Jamison, president of the Blue Ridge League of organized ball and prominent business man of Hagerstown, will be asked to head the circuit.

A decision as to organizing such a circuit probably will be made at a meeting to be held in Martinsburg Sunday, it was decided at a gathering of valley baseball leaders here last night. A committee of seven has been named to wait upon Mr. Jamison to see if he will accept the post.

Lewis H. Thompson, Martinsburg, long identified with baseball in the valley, and president of the Martinsburg Club of the Blue Ridge League for many years, was named first vice president; Thomas K. Scheller, Chambersburg attorney, second vice president; R. M. Morgenthal, head of the Twilight League at Waynesboro, third vice president; Henry Decker, sports writer, Frederick, secretary, and Charles Earhart, Winchester, Va., business man, as treasurer.

Rockingham Schools Open Season April 13

Harrisonburg, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—With eight teams in the race, the Rockingham County High School Baseball League will open play on April 13. There are two divisions of four teams each and the winners will play a series for the championship in May.

The eastern division is composed of Port Republic, last year's champions; McGaheysville, Pleasant Hill and Keezletown. The latter two are newcomers in the circuit. The western division includes Timberville, Linville-Edom, Mount Clinton and Dayton.

Soccer Season To Be Resumed On Sunday

4 Games Listed After Long Lay-Off; Schools May Play Tomorrow.

THIS week-end will mark a resumption of soccer in Washington after one of the longest lay-offs because of unfavorable weather the sport has known in this section for years. Four games will be played Sunday and possibly one tomorrow morning, with Park View and Rosedale meeting on Monument No. 1 field in the final game for Department of Playgrounds insect championship at 11 o'clock if the ground is sufficiently firm.

Sunday's games include the semi-final for the Southeastern Association Cup between Mitchell's Store and German-Americans on Monument field No. 2 at 2:30 o'clock. This game will be preceded by one game between Miller Furniture and New York Avenue of the Recreation League on field No. 1, starting at 1 o'clock.

The Capital City League will play its first game in eight weeks, with Gaithersburg playing British United at Gaithersburg and Marlboro meeting the Hispano-Americans at Marlboro. The following league officials and representatives of teams will be among those meeting tonight at 637 Farragut street northwest at 8 o'clock, when the league schedule will be revised and arrangements made for a social function: Vice president, R. J. Dietle; secretary, E. J. Higgins; M. Buck, Marlboro; R. Mitchell, Mitchell Store; William Smith, British-American, and Davidson, Hispano-American.

Stone Center Of All Eyes At Biloxi

Right-Field Job Is His; Goslin Due to Beome Forgotten Man.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor, The Post.)

BILOXI, Miss., March 15.—With the arrival of some ball players, as distinguished from pitchers and catchers, who are only specialists, anyway, the Nats' training camp took on a life-like appearance today after the little company here began to despair of seeing a new face, if perchance one roused himself to the point of looking up.

Like magic, the Nats' personnel, the hotel and the ball yard snapped out of the lethargy of the past two weeks as the newcomers filtered into camp and the team that Joe Cronin will place on the field on April 16 began to take shape here in Biloxi with the arrival of such important people as Buddy Myer, Johnny Stone, Fred Schulte, Joe Kuhel, Johnny Kerr, Dave Harris and Heinie Manush.

Sington Hits 'Em.

Not quite so important, but still the cynosure of all eyes, was big, shaggy-haired, bull-necked Freddy Sington, the Atlanta campus hero, who is here with a heart full of hope and a trunk full of bats in an attempt to blast his way into a semimonthly big league pay check after two seasons in the underbrush of baseball.

Sington shouldered, and I mean shouldered, his way into the spotlight with some lusty smacking in this morning's batting practice, but this fellow, Johnny Stone, bulks far more seriously into the 1934 plans of Manager Joe Cronin, inasmuch as he is the lad who is expected to make Goose Goslin but a dim memory in right field for the Nats.

Job Is Mr. Stone's.

John Thomas Stone, of Mulberry, Tenn., suh, is 6 feet 180 pounds of ball player by the looks of him, and there is nothing in his record to arouse the suspicion that he can't play ball. He brings a lifetime batting average of .303 to the Nats after five years with Detroit, with a significant hitting percentage of .327 in 147 games back in 1931, when he stole 13 bases, among other things.

The right field job in Griffith Stadium and points around the circuit is Stone's to have and to hold as long as he hits respectably, because there has never been any question of his ability to go places and get things in the outfield. His advantage in speed over Goslin is pure gain for the Nats, and will enable the fleet Fred Schulte to lend a bit of assistance to Heinie Manush's left field territory.

Oh, yes, Stone is glad to be with the Nats. He thinks Joe Cronin is a great manager, and a fine fellow to play for. He always liked Washington and thinks the Nats will be up there or thereabouts this season, which proves that he isn't a bit original. Ball players traded from one club to another have been saying the same thing ever since Benedict Arnold announced he was glad to play with the British.

Youngest in Outfield.

Of course, you know that Stone bats left-handed and throws right. He is 27 and the youngest among the regular outfield of Manush, Stone and Schulte.

Joe Cronin, mindful of his position as manager, could not help but observe with rapt attention the batting pyrotechnics of big Sington, who swings his bat from backstage and rides the ball on long flights when he connects. The latter item, however, will decide Sington's fate with the Nats. As yet his eye is not properly attuned to the ball and the suspicion is that the Nats' board of strategy will wrest away from him his pet bat which is heavy enough to sink a ship.

Florendale Lous Beau's Sons Win in Rappahannock Trials

The Beau's brilliant young proteges scored a one-two victory, with third place going to Kent Proctor, the entry of Leigh Bonsall, of Baltimore.

Starpoise, owned by Capt. R. H. Clemmer, of Waynesboro, gained the coveted award by outpointing his litter mate, Equity, from the Staunton Kennels of Virgil P. Hawes. Both entries were handled by Capt. Clemmer.

The special trophy for the owner of the best unplaced puppy whelped since May 1, 1933, went to Emmett R. Colbert, of Fredericksburg, whose Bensteve, Jr., gave a sparkling performance.

Twenty-two youngsters, one of the largest post-depression fields to compete in the Rappahannock spring trials, came from five States to do their stuff. Among the entries were Portsmouth's Jake and Alleghany Jake, second and third place winners in the recent Virginia Amateur Trial Association's Puppy Stake at Camp Lee.

At a business meeting of the Rappahannock Association last night Graham D. Richardson, of Weedonville, was reelected president. Other officers named were C. B. Carmichael, of Fredericksburg, first president; J. W. Dorsey Cook, Potomac Beach, second vice president; Lloyd L. Stevens, Quantico, third vice president, and Leo V. Timberlake, secretary-treasurer.

Directors are Ellet R. Colbert, W. Marshall King, Jesse L. Burgess, Herman O. Slanson and Dr. J. Garnett King, jr.

LaSalle Is Planning To Resume Baseball

Cumberland, Md., March 15 (Spl.).—LaSalle Institute will be represented by a baseball team this spring, according to Coach Pat Conway. There was some talk of the Blue and Gold supporting a nine last year, but no action was taken.

Winchester Five Bows To Martinsburg Elks

Winchester, Va., March 15 (Spl.).—Rhodes, star forward of the Martinsburg (W. Va.) Elks basket ball team, proved too much for the Winchester Moose five on the Handley court here, and the West Virginians won, 28 to 27.

Governor and Party See Judge Schilling Score Length Victory at Hialeah Park

Mountain Elk Held Off in Late Bid

Pass Takes First Race; Style Corner Takes Fourth Event.

HIALEAH PARK, March 15 (AP).—The Miami Jockey Club's annual charity program, headed by the 1-mile governor's purse, was offered here this afternoon and Florida's chief executive, his wife and party were the honored guests of J. E. Widener and his associates.

Fred Kraft's 9-year-old gelding, Judge Schilling, running with as much youthful vim and vigor as ever, raced to his second straight triumph in the feature, which drew a half dozen high grade platers postward. Earl Porter, America's leading rider to date this year, guided the veteran to a one-length decision over G. W. Ogle's Mountain Elk. C. C. Smithson's One Chance was beaten a neck for the place.

Owner Given Trophy.

Judge Schilling's time was 1:37 3-5 and he paid $6.20. After the event Governor Sholtz presented owner Kraft with a trophy while the big crowd, which had disregarded threatening weather, applauded the occasion.

Judge Schilling and Mountain Elk, the latter a slight favorite, had the race between them from the break. Porter let the Judge open up a commanding lead over his chief rival. Mountain Elk began to creep up gradually around the final bend and although he cut the winner's margin down to a length passing the finish, backers of the victor never had a really anxious moment. One Chance made up many lengths from the far side and caught Vox Pop in the closing strides.

Pass Is Victorious.

Pass, gelded son of Chance Shot, but form players on the right side of the ledger to begin the day. With Johnny Gilbert doing the kicking, the chestnut 3-year-old finally graduated from the maiden ranks, leading eight other nonwinners of his age to the judges in a hard drive with Bernie K. The latter was beaten a half length, while holding five spans advantage over Tight Wad. Pass ran Larissa down early and continued gamely to thwart Bernie K's stretch bid. The winner paid $5.40.

Two well-played fillies fought it out in the second. Little Dinah got up to record a nose victory over Hardatit in the dash for maiden juveniles. Happy Helen began slowly, but made up ground rapidly to land in the picture, three lengths away. Hardatit disposed of Alanova in short order and led Little Dinah until the final stride, when Jimmy Burke lifted his mount over the line with a last mighty lunge. The winner returned $7.80.

Waterset Pays $9.30.

Silvio Coucci and Waterset proved the winning combination in the third event. Distribute, the favorite, bowed by a length, but saved second money by three lengths from Sequoia. Waterset chased Sequoia to the stretch, then assumed command and held Distribute under control in a hard-fought duel through the home lane. Waterset was not without supporters, paying $9.30.

Style Corner gave Silvio Coucci a double in the fourth race, but his victory was touched with luck. Both Hernando and Dornoch, the second and third horses, met with bad racing luck. Style Corner won by a nose, while Hernando beat Dornoch a head. Coucci sent Style Corner to the front right after the start and the gelding, saving ground, just lasted to win. Hernando was in early trouble, while Dornoch was messed about at the start and lost ground. The winner paid $9.30.

Dark Conquest Wins.

Well-played horses again fought it out nip and tuck when Dark Conquest, under Bobby Jones' powerful whip finish, nosed out Drombo in the sixth number. Salut d' Amour was three lengths behind in the third hole. Drombo made all the pace and seemed to have the race won until inside the final sixteenth. Dark Conquest caught the pacemaker about 20 yards from the finish and outgamed him to return $6.70.

Lone Hand, $6.90, won the closing contest by a length from Come On. St. Christopher lost the place by five lengths.

The answer to the problem about the striking clock is: If it takes three seconds for a clock to strike 3, it will take 16½ seconds to strike 12. The reason for this is: In striking 3, there are but two intervals between striking—the interval between the first and second, and the interval between the second and third. Therefore, the intervals are 1½ seconds each. When the clock strikes 12, there are 11 such intervals. If each interval is 1½ seconds, it will take 1½ times 11, or 16½ seconds, for the clock to strike 12.

One of the most spectacular rescues known to construction men was the one at Boulder Dam when a "high scaler," Oliver Cowan, caught a falling engineer as he plunged headlong through the air toward the rocky bottom of the canyon several hundred feet below. The engineer was B. R. Rutledge.

He was working without a safety rope high on the edge of the cliff above Cowan. A loose rock turned under his foot, causing him to lose his footing. He grasped at a rope but could not hold—then plunged down to what seemed certain death.

For some unexplained reason, at that particular moment Cowan happened to look up and see the man falling toward him. Cowan braced his feet and kicked himself away from the canyon wall, swinging out on his safety rope. In a split second he swung out far enough to catch Rutledge.

Dear Al:

Bennings, Inc., tossed in three winners in the Race Selectors' Handicap today, picking Pass, the only favorite to score; Little Dinah, my weakness, and Lone Hand, that rascal. However, I would have traded two of them to have seen Dornoch get the important money in the fourth race. Sorenson rode the Bennings' best bet as if he were in a circus act. He ad Dornoch tangled in the legs of horses for 100 yards and then pulled up to go to the outside for the journey. Dornoch closed with a rush and we were separated from an 8-to-1 shot by a nose and a head. It is things like that that start revolutions.

BILL.

First race—Bichloride will draw Porter for the saddle work tomorrow and despite the fact that he is not particularly keen about the sprint route we must place him on top. In High will be dangerous regardless of that top weight. Screen with only 99 pounds has a fighting chance.

Second race—I'm offering a guilt-edged badge for the next December meeting at Charles Town to any one who can pick them one, two, three in this puddle jump. Twenty-four unruly juveniles have been named. I'll take Migrate, Earl Maxwell and Cheka for my guess.

Third race—Fairly Wild and Porter gets the Benning call in this mile. The star jockey needs only to ride one of his good races. Bright Bubble is the one to beat. Boy Crazy will draw a lot of play and should have something to say about the purse distribution.

Fourth race—Going to try to beat Miney Myerson tomorrow with Golden Fate. Mike gave me a fast workout on the latter and I lean that way. Cathop had a rather rough trip last out and can improve.

Fifth race—Clonard will have the hard-riding Silvio Coucci aboard tomorrow, and off that fast effort which found him a neck away at the finish, I believe we can make no mistakes. Gilbert up on Chance Line makes him a threat. Eurydice for the show.

Sixth race—Sabula gets in this mile test with 104 pounds and figures to take care of this field. Hokuao and Live One promise to make a battle of it. Khorasan, the ancient one, is reported sharp and worth a long-shot splurge.

Seventh race—Rego has shown much speed on occasions and may have to be caught by this field. Kiltamond and Flying Gypsy to take care of the others.

2 W. & L. Rasslers To Vie in Tourney

Lexington, Va., March 15 (AP).—Two members of the team that helped Washington and Lee University win the Southern Conference wrestling championship will seek further honors in the National Intercollegiate Wrestling Tournament at Ann Arbor, Mich., March 23 and 24.

They are Hugo Bonino, conference heavyweight title holder, and Co-captain Charlie Pritchard, former 165-pound champion.

Pritchard, who suffered the first defeat of his career at the hands of Charlie Dorrier, of V. M. I., in the finals of the Southern Conference Tournament this year, probably will wrestle at his natural weight, 155 pounds, in the National, although it is quite possible that he will scale down to 145.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PASS, $5.40, $3.10, $2.40; BERNIE K, $3.90, $3.50; TIGHT WAD, $3.60.

PASS was hustled away from the gate, went up on outside, assumed command turning out of back stretch, opened a wide lead and saved ground, tired suddenly, but held on gamely. BERNIE K. weakly ridden in early part, closed very fast in run through stretch. TIGHT WAD was taken the overland route and closed a big sap. SHUFFLE OFF, away well, free and clear of interference, had no mishap. LARISSA had speed for three furlongs and then quit.

SECOND RACE—Three furlongs (straightaway), nursery course. Purse $700. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 2:47. Off at 2:48. Winner, S. W. Labrot's b. f. (2), by Sir Greystee—Dinah Did Upset. Trained by W. Irvine. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:34 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WATERSET, $9.30, $3.50, $3.00; DISTRIBUTE, $3.40, $2.70; SEQUOIA, $3.00.

WATERSET, under good handling, followed SEQUOIA to the stretch, where she was sent to the front and held on gamely. DISTRIBUTE was hard ridden all the way and finished gamely. SEQUOIA displayed good speed, but quit badly at the end of five furlongs. CLEONE closed very fast on inside. MASKED PRINCE showed flash of early speed.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming prices, $1,500 to $1,200. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:52. Off at 3:53. Winner, Mrs. A. G. Marchant's b. g. (4), by Whiskaway—Watch Your Stitch. Trained by A. G. Marchant. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:12 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STYLE CORNER, $9.30, $4.10, $3.40; HERNANDO, $4.70, $3.90; DORNOCH, $5.50.

STYLE CORNER was hustled away from the gate and rated along in front, saved ground at every stride, and just lasted to win. HERNANDO broke fast, but was crowded back in early part, recovered and closed with a rush. He might have won with better racing luck. DORNOCH, away in a tangle, was taken the overland route and finished with a rush. JUST BUCK was in close quarters in stretch. TRANSEN had speed for half a mile and then quit. QUORUM ran well for half a mile.

FIFTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $800; claiming prices, $2,500 to $2,000. The Governor's Purse. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:21. Off at 4:24. Winner, F. E. Kraft's br. g. (9), by Hand Grenade—Runnura. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:37 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JUDGE SCHILLING, $6.20, $2.70, $2.70; MOUNTAIN ELK, $2.70, $2.60; ONE CHANCE, $3.80.

JUDGE SCHILLING broke well, ran into early lead, was nicely rated in front, tired in stretch, but gamely held on. MOUNTAIN ELK was allowed to gallop along and moved up fast entering stretch, but could not catch the winner. ONE CHANCE trailed far back and finished with a rush. VOX POP, on the inside all the way, had no mishap. PASS SHOT went well.

WEATHER, DRIZZLING. TRACK, FAST.

SIXTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $800; claiming prices $1,500 to $1,200. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start poor. Won driving; place easily. Went to post at 4:53 1-5. Off at 4:55. Winner, Fair Field Stable ch. g. (4) by T. Jaumer-Sun Vive. Trained by J. Whyte. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time 1:37 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARK CONQUEST, $6.70, $3.70, $3.00; DROMBO, $3.30, $2.60; SALUT D'AMOUR, $3.50.

DARK CONQUEST worked his way up under a good ride, closed gamely under the whip, and just got up to win. DROMBO broke very fast, set a stiff pace, and held on well in drive. SALUT D'AMOUR was hustled along all the way. SCOUT MASTER got away slowly, was forced wide all the way, and stopped fast in stretch. APPREHENSIVE, outrun in early part, saved ground turning into stretch and was running strong at end.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $700; claiming prices, $1,200 to $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start fair. Won ridden out; place, easily. Went to post at 5:21. Off at 5:24. Stocks React 1.4 Points on Silver Slump

Mining Issues Unloaded as Sales Total Rises to 1,355,780 Shares.

New York, March 15 (AP).—Weakness of silver stocks spread to other sections of the market today and the closing averaged more than a point lower.

Trading was very dull until the last hour, when speculative holdings of some mining issues were unloaded following the break in silver prices, which had obviously been prompted by Secretary Morgenthau's expressed opposition to further change in the Government's silver policy.

White metal futures dipped nearly 2 cents at one time and spot was off almost a cent. Far Eastern currencies also reacted.

Silver Hopes Blighted.

Those who had expected that "something" more was to be done for silver at this time were apparently disappointed by the Treasury Secretary's remarks.

U. S. Smelting dropped nearly 9 points, and American Smelting, International Silver and Cerro de Pasco were off around 2 each. For a quarter of an hour selling was energetic throughout the list, but most leaders succeeded in reducing their extreme losses before closing time.

The labor situation in the automobile industry received prominence and motor shares softened, though industrials generally felt rather depressed. A General Motors spokesman announced that the company was following the recommendation of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce for a 10 per cent curtailment of hours and a corresponding wage increase.

The assertion of President Green of the American Federation of Labor that the motor industry was "on the verge of one of the greatest strikes in the history of the Nation," was conspicuous in the day's news budget, which again centered largely around developments at the National Capital.

On Losing List.

Net losses of about a point were recorded by U. S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, American Telephone, Kennecott, Du Pont, Montgomery Ward and Bethlehem Steel. Rails were less aggressive than of late, though their decline was mostly moderate; Santa Fe yielded nearly 2 points.

Isolated firm spots were provided by Schenley Distillers, which rose 2 on rumors of favorable earnings, and National Biscuit whose directors maintained the dividend rate. Transfers totaled 1,355,780 shares.

The mid-March turnover in the money market was the smallest in some time, mostly because the Treasury's financing was lighter than usual, involving redemption of only $460,000,000 in maturing certificates. Income tax collections, expected to be higher than a year ago, constituted another item.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Writer in "Today" Sees Increased Bureaucracy With Sweeping Powers, Excess Profits Tax and Government Control of Credit as Essential.

By Ralph West Robey.

Schuyler C. Wallace, in the current issue of the magazine Today, touches on one aspect of the problem of Government control of industry in this country that so far has received little attention.

This is the question of the Government taking control of credit. We have had, of course, considerable discussion on the general issue of a socialization of the banking system, but Mr. Wallace's point is quite different. Instead of viewing such a possibility as merely a problem of the Government getting deeper and deeper into the economic system, he views the control of credit as a necessity growing out of the continuation of NRA.

Underlying such a conclusion is a view that is gaining wider and wider acceptance. This is that we now have reached the point where "those who direct the New Deal must decide whether they are going to retreat to the anti-trust laws or advance along the line of closer regulation of industry." If the latter course is decided upon, three things will be necessary, in the opinion of Mr. Wallace.

First will be the "building up of a new class of Government officers capable of identifying themselves completely with the public National interest . . . and of acquiring expertness in industrial management." These individuals, too, will have to be given "a far greater sweep of power than has hitherto been granted to the existing utility commissions." We must have, in other words, "the development of a Government bureaucracy" that will have power "to prevent any action on the part of private interests injurious to the public welfare" and "to compel action on the part of industries where action seems desirable."

Must Use Taxation For Social Purposes.

Second among those things necessary if we move ahead to greater control, is "the use of taxation for a social purpose." What Mr. Wallace has in mind specifically here is the use of an excess profits tax. He assumes, and I think quite correctly, that it is impossible t have "economic planning" without a greater or lesser amount of price fixing, and that under such a condition no "Governmental agency, however aggressive . . . will be able to stop certain segments of industry from making enormous profits." Such profits, it is recognized, can not be returned directly to those who have contributed to them by their purchases, but it is possible for "the Government to make use" of them through taxation "to lighten the tax burden of consumers everywhere."

Last of the great actions that must be taken is "Government control of credit." This, Mr. Wallace states, "is absolutely imperative if the new industrial order is to be publicly controlled" for "it and it alone is a weapon with which the Government could enforce its decrees." Through it and the power of taxation it would be possible "to reduce even the most stubborn of industries to its knees." It seems to me that there scarcely is room to question that this would be the case, for with this combination no industry, regardless of the state of its economic health at the moment, could afford to go contrary to the dictation of Washington.

Must Choose Between This And Retracing Our Steps.

Such, then, in brief, are the alternatives as seen by this analysis. Unless we turn back we must have a governmental bureaucracy with the power to give orders on the management and operation of every business unit in the country; a constant threat of ruin if the orders are disobeyed; the amputation of all, or more or less all, of any profits arising from effecient operation and superior management; and Government supervision, through control of credit of the direction in which we may turn our activities.

This is not, I believe, the kind of an economic system that the American public desires. At the same time, I think that the analysis of Mr. Wallace is basically correct. We have got to the point where either we must move on into such a condition as he pictures or start retracing our steps. Rather, the choice that faces us, or at least should face us, is between moving ahead into such Fascism and returning to a system of economic freedom that is not wrecked by practices that are no more inherent to such a system than Capone was to the social life of Chicago.

Remington Arms Reports $1,492,629 Net Loss; Brake Return Up.

New York, March 15 (AP).—Fox Film Corporation reported a profit from operations of $1,410,793 for the 39 weeks since its reorganization beginning April 1 to December 30, 1933, compared with a loss for the 40 weeks ended December 31, 1932, of $7,595,100.

On the basis of the 2,436,409 shares of class "A" and "B" stock outstanding, these earnings amount to 58 cents per share, on which $1,-060,015, or 44 cents per share, was earned during the last quarter of the year.

Remington Arms Co., Inc., reports a 1933 net loss, after all charges, of $1,492,629, compared with net loss of $794,242 in 1932. Dollar sales totaled $9,055,126, against $7,685,268 in the previous years.

American Brake Shoe & Foundry Co. declared a quarterly dividend of 20 cents on the common stock, compared with previous disbursements of 15 cents, payable March 31 to holdings of record March 23.

General Stockyards Corporation today declared a dividend of 25 cents on the common stock, payable May 1 to holdings of record April 16. The last previous payment was 50 cents on November 1, 1933.

United Stores Corporation reports 1933 net income of $426,669, compared with $565,539 in 1932. During 1933 the company made a write-down of investments amounting to $11,971,723, of which $11,544,-891 was charged out of capital surplus, the balance being applied against earned surplus.

The annual report of the Union Tank Car Co. for 1933 shows net income of $1,193,716 after fixed charges, equal to approximately 99 cents a share on 1,200,000 shares outstanding, compared with $1,055,-826, or 84 cents a share in 1932.

Columbian Carbon Co. and subsidiaries report net profit in 1933 of $1,165,709 after fixed charges and provision for minority interests, equal to $2.16 a share, compared with $954,016, or $1.77 a share in 1932.

Curb Market Declines Under Mild Selling

Alcohols Are Mixed; Oils and Metals Easy; Trading Totals 284,000.

New York, March 15 (AP).—The Curb Market finished at a slightly lower level today under mild selling. Recessions were generally limited to fractions to around a point.

Alcohols were mixed and oils and metals just a trifle easy. Among the power shares, American Gas & Electric and American Light & Traction each lost more than a point, and Electric Bond & Share was off a fraction. A brief selling flurry occurred around the start of the final hour, but otherwise trading was dull.

Novadel Agene moved against the trend for a 2-point rise and Hirani Walker and Dow Chemical ended a little higher. Gulf Oil, Swift & Co. and Aluminum Co. of America were a shade easier, while declines of around a point occurred in Waco Aircraft, Schiff Co., Newmont Mining and Bliss Corporation. General Tire & Rubber dropped 3.

Transfers which approximated 284,000 were about the same as Wednesday.

Goods Markets.

New York, March 15 (A.P.).—Minor concessions running to ⅛ cent a yard are obtainable on print cloths sold from second hands, but cottons are generally steady in a quiet trading period. Wool goods are selling moderately for fall, and small spot delivery orders are reported. Silks are selling moderately for cutting-up needs. Rayon gray goods are more active for converting for dress wear. Burlaps sell in moderate quantities for future shipment. Spots are quiet.

Advances	138	354
Declines	538	262
Unchanged	117	185
Total	793	801

Stocks—Weakness of silver spread to the stock market and prices tumbled 1.4 points on the averages. Trading was dull until the final hour when mining issues were unloaded. Sales volume increased slightly to 1,355,780 shares.

Bonds—Some soft spots developed, but bonds continued the upward drive and scored another new high since 1931. Sales volume dwindled to $16,451,000.

Curb—The market finished slightly under mild selling. Recessions were limited to fractions to around a point. Alcohols were mixed. Oils and metals were just a trifle easy. Transfers totaled 284,000 shares.

Wheat—Downward plunges of silver reacted on wheat and prices tumbled. Weakness of Winnipeg wheat contributed also to the decline. The market was unsupported by buyers. May wheat sold at 86⅛; July, at 87.

Rubber — Crude rubber futures closed steady, 2 to 5 points higher. March sold at 11.45; May, at 11.60.

Sugar—Raw sugar was unchanged at 3.15; refined sold at 4.50.

Gold—Bar gold sold in the United States at $35.00 per ounce. It sold in London at 136 shillings and 4 pence.

Dollar—The United States dollar was steady on foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $5.10 to the English pound; 6.58 cents to the French franc, and 39.72 cents to the German mark.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Wool—Prices remain firm in primary markets in spite of the continued buying lull. Trade quarters assert that sizeable amounts of good domestic wool are not easy to locate.

Hardware—"Expansion continues in sales whether reported by manufacturer or wholesalers," says Hardware Age. The periodical reports that the movement of goods has returned to normal in areas where the demand was retarded by the February storms.

Pig Iron—Last week's sales in the New York district made an improved showing at around 2,500 tons and demand has become more active in other districts, according to trade sources.

Tin—Domestic buyers have shown little inclination to pick up metal, except as urgently needed, in the course of the recent sharp upturn in prices, according to market observers.

Bond Market Sets High Peak As Sales Drop

Some Soft Spots Develop as Trading Dwindles to $16,451,000.

New York, March 15 (AP).—While some soft spots developed in the bond market today coincident with heaviness of stocks, gains predominated at the close and a number of issues again pushed through their highs of the past two years or more.

The trading volume dwindled in the afternoon when scattered reactionary tendencies appeared and transfers finally totaled only $16,-451,000, par value, compared with $19,476,000 yesterday.

The average for 60 domestic corporate loans advanced one-tenth of a point to 85.8, another top since 1931.

Nervous Over Labor Status.

The market seemed to be a little nervous over the various labor situations which are being aired in the hearings at Washington. At the same time, there was no pressing liquidation evident and many bids were reported just under prevailing prices.

Prime investment bonds were again the most popular, principal recessions being recorded in the secondary groups.

The majority of U. S. Government securities finished with gains of 1-32 to 9-32 of a point, although the activity here was a bit under that of the previous session.

The largest advance in the Federals was registered by Liberty First 4¼s when the Treasury failed to call this issue for redemption on June 15.

U. S. Treasury Announcement.

Interest was expressed in the announcement of the Treasury that the exchange offer of 3 per cent notes for some $460,000,000 of certificates maturing today had been accepted by holders of about $453,-000,000 of the issue.

Bankers were surprised that holders of the remaining $5,000,000 certificates did not make the exchange in view of the indicated premium for the new notes.

Federal Light 5s gained 5¼, Houston Oil 5½s were up 3½ and Milwaukee Electric Railway 5s advanced 2¾.

Among Other Gainers.

Other active corporate gainers of fractions to around a point included loans of Santa Fe, Canadian Pacific, Burlington, Chicago & Northwestern, Consolidated Gas, Louisville & Nashville, Great Northern, Hudson Coal, Paramount, Pennsylvania, U. S. Rubber and United Drug.

Among the more pronounced losers were issues of Western Pacific, Studebaker, Nickel Plate, St. Paul, Chesapeake Corporation, American Waterworks, American Rolling Mill, American & Foreign Power and Alleghany Corporation.

The foreign section was quiet and mildly irregular. The Argentines, Austrians, Australians and some of the Germans sagged. Obligations of Colombia, Cuba and Norway improved.

Air Passengers Increase.

Chicago, March 15 (AP).—American Airways carried 6,216 revenue passengers in February, a gain of 11.03 per cent over the 5,598 carried a year ago. The number in January of this year was 6,142.

Wheat Tumbles On Sinking of Silver Prices

Morgenthau Stand Catches Market Short of Buyers; All Grains Lose.

Chicago, March 15 (AP).—Jolted by downward plunges of the silver market, wheat prices underwent a material break today.

Word that Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau was opposed to any silver legislation at this time gave a decidedly unsettled impulse to wheat prices, because much of a recent bulge in wheat had been on buying due to belief that important enactments favoring silver were in prospect.

Weakness of the Winnipeg wheat market contributed to the downward trend in Chicago, especially as Winnipeg messages indicated that lowering of prices appeared essential to bring about a better demand for wheat from Canada.

Intentions on Planting.

Government figures on farmers' intentions as to spring planting of 1934 domestic grain crops were not available until after business today was at an end. No great significance, as a market factor, traders said, appeared to be attached to the showing.

Wheat closed unstable at around the day's bottom prices, 1¼ to 1½ under yesterday's finish; corn, ⅛ to ½ down; oats, ⅝ to ⅞ off, and provisions showing 2 cents to 7 cents decline.

From the outset, wheat values were adversely affected by uncertainties regarding Washington developments, but it was not until statements made by Secretary Morgenthau were received that the wheat market gave way in earnest. The news concerning Morgenthau's stand caught the wheat market devoid of aggressive buying support, and as a consequence scattered selling that developed was sufficient to carry prices quickly downhill.

Warlike Suggestions Ignored.

Wheat traders virtually ignored warlike suggestions implied in Buenos Aires cables saying Argentine packing plants had asked government permission to work day and night to fill urgent orders for canned meats to be shipped to Japan.

Liquidation of contracts for May delivery of wheat appeared at times, and although on a limited scale was a factor which tended to hinder price rallies. For at least the time being, traders friendly to higher prices were unable to make headway, despite continued dry conditions in wheat territory Southwest, with private crop reports persistent. Kansas and Oklahoma official crop summaries were rather optimistic.

Provisions reflected grain market declines.

Wall Street Briefs.

New York, March 15 (AP).—C. E. Adams, president of Air Reduction Co., said at the annual stockholders' meeting today that the company had "certain important developments in mind" which would carry it into new fields and requires substantial cash. For this reason a large cash surplus has been built up and maintained.

Speyer & Co. and J. Henry Schroder Banking Co., fiscal agents for the State of San Paulo 7 per cent coffee realization loan, 1930, announced that April 1 coupons will be paid when due, and that they have been instructed to draw for redemption on that day $1,225,000 in bonds of the loan.

Raw sugar shipments from the Philippines to the United States from November 1 to February 28 totaled 507,357 long tons, compared with 420,425 tons in the same period a year ago, according to the New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange. Refined shipments for the same period were 30,115 tons, against 20,588 tons.

Strength of two international commodities, rubber and tin, is regarded in Wall street as an interesting commentary on world recovery. Tin in London is at its highest price since 1928, while the New York two of the distant rubber futures have topped 12 cents a pound, bettering last year's highs.

Holders of common stock of the United States Steel Corporation numbered 187,019 at the beginning of March, a decrease of 101 from December 1. On March 1, 1933, the total was 192,384. The company's first preferred dividend went to 62,000 holders against 63,056 in November and 63,199 in February, '33.

Alfred P. Sloan, jr., president of General Motors Corporation, says in a letter to common stockholders accompanying the dividend payment of 25 cents that although it is possible to make a statement at this time regarding probable first quarter earnings, the owners "may consider that this dividend payment have been fully earned." Earnings would be still greater, he adds, if it were not for the fact that we have been delays in production carried over from last year, chiefly affecting January and, to some extent, February sales."

Week's Productions Rises to 2,313,900 Barrels; Imports Drop.

New York, March 15 (AP).—Daily average gross crude oil production in the United States increased 130,600 barrels in the week ended March 10, totaling 2,313,900 barrels, the American Petroleum Institute's weekly summary said today.

Silver Prices Decline On Morgenthau's Stand

New York, March 15 (AP).—Word that Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau opposed further Government action with respect to silver at this time was followed by a sharp slump in the silver market today.

Futures had extreme losses of nearly 2 cents an ounce, although short covering checked the decline later. Bar metal was quoted at 45⅞ cents an ounce, off ⅞ cent.

Prince Georges Liquor Permit Rush Slows Up

License Is Granted for Rum Sale at Bowie Race Track.

A marked slowing up in the issuance of liquor permits marked the semi-monthly meeting yesterday of the Prince Georges County Board of License Commissioners. One license for the sale of liquor, beer and wine and two for the sale of beer were granted. One application was rejected and decision on another postponed.

Two temporary on-sale beer licenses were issued to Walter Susini, of Laurel, and Robert E. Brennan, jr., of Berwyn.

The application of William Earle Hindle, of T. B., for an off-sale license was rejected.

Action on the request of a group of Oxon Hill citizens for the establishment of a "dry" area on Livingston road, near the District line, was postponed until March 29. The board is withholding action on the application of Elmer Cox, who is seeking an on-sale liquor license.

The petition submitted asked that Cox's application be refused because "it was believed any sale might become a serious nuisance, disturb the law-abiding community and be undesirable because the applicant's establishment is almost directly in front of a school bus terminus."

Approval of an application by Frank Wyvill, of Upper Marlboro, for a license to sell beer, wine and liquor at the Bowie race track was given by the board. Racing starts at Bowie April 2.

Peery Will Greet Greeters Tonight

Middle Atlantic Meeting Set in Richmond.

Richmond, March 15 (AP).—Gov. George C. Peery will pit his skill at extending greetings against experts here tomorrow night. He is scheduled to welcome the Middle Atlantic Association of Greeter Charters, as they open a three-day convention.

Delegates from Massachusetts to South Carolina will attend. The toastmaster and speaker at the opening banquet will be State Senator Robert O. Norris, of Lancaster. Ralph J. Hewlett, of Charlottesville, Va., and A. Gerald Bush, president of the Richmond Hotel Men's Association, will also extend greetings.

BAKER.

MISSOURIANS say "Show me!" We turned the tables and asked them to show us. And we in turn will show the world tomorrow in the Federal Diary's Parade of the States what a great homeland theirs is and how many famous sons and daughters hail from there.

Federal employes from Minnesota, Alabama and Iowa are urged to send in items about their fellow workers this week so none will be left out when those three States pass in review next.

NOMINEES for membership on the Executive Council of Local No. 2, N. F. F. E., are announced by R. E. Lowe, chairman of the elections committee. The elections will be held April 6 at a meeting of the board of representatives of the local and its 18 branches, the oldest Federal employe organization in the District.

Nominees include J. Ernest Brault, G. A. O.; Robert W. Cushman, Library of Congress; John F. Deeds, Geological Survey; Dr. Howard A. Edson, Civil Service Commission; Harold Keenan, Foreign and Domestic Commerce; James H. Salt, Postoffice Division, G. A. O.; Samuel Snyder, Patent Office; John A. Schricker, Arlington Farms; Warren J. Hammacher, Civil Service Commission; Arthur H. Howell, Biological Survey, Agriculture; Archie C. Edwards, Agricultural Economics; E. A. Jutz, Foreign and Domestic Commerce; Miss O. C. Chaney, I. C. C., and L. L. Anderson, Forest Service. Seven of the foregoing will be chosen.

New officers of the local will be inducted at the same meeting, to serve two years. They are:

Joseph Stansfield, I. C. C., president; Harlow Bacon, Coast and Geodetic Survey, vice president; Henry G. Nolda, Veterans' Administration, secretary-treasurer, and A. M. Reising, Interior, recorder.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF your name is followed by (*), call in person on the Federal Diary editor between 4:30 and 6 p. m. You will receive tickets to Loew's Columbia (Greta Garbo and John Gilbert, in "Queen Christina") or to Loew's Palace (Frederic March, Miriam Hopkins and George Raft in "All of Me") or to Loew's Fox (stage, Benny Meroff's Orchestra, Kitchen Pirates and other acts; screen, Ann Harding in "Gallant Lady"). Persons whose names appear on holidays, call for tickets the next day.

An open meeting to which all Government employes are welcome will be held tonight by Public Buildings and Public Parks Lodge No. 11, A. F. G. E. at the Esbitt Hotel, Tenth and H streets northwest. E. H. Bailey, president announces. N. J. Cunningham, secretary, lists Representative Rogers of Oklahoma and Representative Connery of Massachusetts as speakers.

Prize Winners Announced.

Treasury employes, members of Local No. 262, N. F. F. E., won fancy glassware and other articles as prizes at the card party which followed the local's business meeting this week at 710 Fourteenth street northwest. Winners at the various tables included Miss Mabel Mathias, Loans and Currency; A. D. Sartwell, Internal Revenue; Miss Rosa E. Duerhing, Division of Securities, and E. C. Hooper, Treasury, secretary-treasurer of the local.

Mrs. Ola G. King was in charge, assisted by Mrs. Dorothy E. Wyncoop and Miss Mathias. During the meeting, Edgar E. Graham, Internal Revenue, made a report on his appearance before the House District Committee investigating street car service. Miss Matilda Lindsay, national organizer, told of a recent visit to locals in Philadelphia and Baltimore.

William Crosswhite, Legal Advisory Committee, AAA, a former star athlete at Kansas University in football and basket ball, entertained Glenn Cunningham, Kansas City star miler, on a visit here recently.

Office Loyalty Shown.

For weeks Miss Grace Delaney (*), secretary to Assistant Director Taylor at Emergency Conservation Work offices, has been notarizing the income tax reports for her fellow workers gratis. The time came this week for Miss Delaney to have her own report notarized—and she couldn't find a single notary in the whole office. Her associates were cognizant of her plight—her weeks of free stamping (Government employes are not allowed to accept notary fees), and so they took up a collection. With solemn ceremony they presented Miss Delaney with 25 pennies, very artistically mounted on a green horseshoe—symbolic of St. Patrick's Day or something.

We suggest that the fee should have been mounted on Scotch plaid.

Plans are under way to form a baseball league among the several divisions at AAA. Play is scheduled to begin April 1. Details for team berths can be obtained from Jimmy Hitchens.

Postettes.

Miss Gertrude Price, RFC, enjoyed a visit to New York recently.

Martin F. Sheehan, Term Insurance, Veterans' Administration, has returned to work after an illness.

Freeman M. Serviss, formerly at Justice, now is with Processing Tax Division, Internal Revenue.

Mrs. Edith Collins, office Chief of Finance, War, has returned to his desk after a short illness.

C. W. Hall, for many years an employe in office Chief of Finance, War, has been retired because of ill health.

Miss Grace Gowens, junior scientist, Bureau of Standards, is enjoying a three weeks' cruise to the West Indies, Central and South America. She will visit friends at Port au Prince, Haiti

Mrs. Madge Stephenson, Internal Revenue, has returned from Norfolk, where she visited her brother, who is in a hospital there as a result of an automobile accident.

Miss Vivian Nolan, Sales Tax Division, Internal Revenue, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Charles Cochrane, in Galesburg, Ill. Miss Nolan plans to return next week.

Eugene A. Ross (*), Sales Tax Division, Internal Revenue, is wearing a smile that will not wear off. He's announcing to the world that "It's a 7½-pound boy."

Miss Elizabeth C. McSorley, Identification Unit, Justice, is visiting friends in Asheville, N. C.

Maurice Friedman, Disbursing Division, AAA, is being congratulated on passing the recent bar examinations.

Roland "Preacher" Adkins, Contract Records, AAA, has been confined to his home for more than a week with a severe cold.

Today's Epitaph.

He thought the weather would grow fair
And with it warmness bring.
He shed his heavy underwear
And waited not for spring.
For coughs and colds, he did not care—
They didn't mean a thing.
And so he traveled onward where
The angels ever sing.

MUTOSCOPE ELECTRIC TRAVELING CRANE

A most amazingly profitable cash business may be immediately established for you by the operation of the new Mutoscope Electric Traveling Crane. Washington offers a new and most attractive field for this strictly legitimate business. Many of these interesting machines are now in operation and providing a real income for their owners. They are strictly guaranteed by the manufacturers, a firm of thirty-nine years' unquestioned reputation.

Instructors and factory service men are now here to help you get started and advise you on any phase of the operation, whether you may be the owner of a few or many machines. This is one of the few enterprises which provide definite cash income from the very start, with so little effort.

There is no obligation imposed upon you by making a telephone appointment with the factory official, S. Carl Mantell, Room 506, the Willard Hotel, who will answer any question and tell you all the facts. It requires so little capital to start that you can not afford to delay.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Another Call — By Harry J. Tuthill

PUFF! PUFF! PUFF! SAID THE WOLF, BUT THE LITTLE RABBIT JUST WHISKED HIS TAIL AND...
THERE'S OUR DOORBELL. I'LL SEE WHO IT IS.
OH! BEG PARDON MRS BUNGLE. THOUGHT IT WAS SOMEONE FOR US. SORRY.
OH IT'S YOU!
YES MRS BUNGLE I HAVE SO MUCH TROUBLE FIND YOU SINCE I LEAVE BOY WITH YOU.
OH DID YOU COME TO TAKE HIM BACK? OH BEFORE YOU DO THAT I'LL HAVE TO KNOW.
I CAN NO TAKE THE BOY NOW. I CALL TO GIVE YOU THIS. HERE. I AM IN BIG HURRY. THANK YOU GOOD BYE.
WHAT! THE WOMAN WHO LEFT THE BOY WITH US? WHY DIDN'T YOU CALL ME?
OH GEORGE IT ALL HAPPENED SO QUICKLY. SHE GAVE ME THIS ENVELOPE. THEN SKIPPED DOWNSTAIRS. WHY IT'S MONEY! AT LEAST $100! OH IMAGINE!

ITS A BIG MOMENT FOR JOE!....THE GROUP OF SPORTS WRITERS HAVE DECIDED ON THE LIST OF FIVE MEN TO MEET DYNAMITE!
Reg. U. S. Pat. Off., © 1934 by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.
YEAH... GO ON... YOU ONLY NAMED FOUR... WHO'S THE FIFTH GUY?
I'D RATHER NOT SAY RIGHT NOW, JOE... YOU SEE, HE'S PRETTY TOUGH... IF I TELL YOU HIS NAME NOW, YOU'D ONLY WORRY... YOU AN' DYNAMITE... AN' IT WOULDN'T BE SO GOOD FOR DYNAMITE NOW TO START LOSIN' SLEEP
PUDDLER GORKLE YOUNG BOPPO TONY ZU GUS
DYNAMITE LOSE SLEEP?... WHAT ABOUT THE OTHER GUY?
DON'T WORRY ABOUT THAT, JOE... HE WON'T LOSE ANY SLEEP
YOU SAID IT, HE WON'T/... NOT AFTER DYNAMITE SOCKS HIM ONE!

DIXIE DUGAN — Heart-Throb Talk — By J. P. McEvoy and J. H. Striebel

HELLO, FLOSSIE!
HELLO YOURSELF! —AN' HOW ARE TH' MOTHS IN YOUR GRANDPA'S BEARD?
LISTEN, DIXIE. —ONE OF MY BOY FRIENDS HAS FOUR TICKETS FOR A SHOW, AN' I THOUGHT—"HERE'S OUR CHANCE FOR THAT DOUBLE DATE!"—I COULD GET AN— OTHER FELLOW FOR YOU, BUT MAYBE—LIKE WE SAID —YOU'D RATHER CALL UP THAT BOY FRIEND O' YOURS—
OH— BUT I NEVER CALL UP FELLOWS
GARGLING GOLDFISH! WHY NOT? —IF YOU WERE A PAIN-IN-TH'-NECK, I'D SAY WELL, YOU DON'T WANT T' INFLICT YOURSELF ON TH' GUY — BUT, MY GOSH — A NIFTY GIRL LIKE YOU? — WHEN YOU CALL A GUY UP YOU'RE GIVIN' HIM A BREAK—AN' AIN'T IT NOBLER T' GIVE THAN T' RECEIVE?
I— I— NEVER THOUGHT OF IT THAT WAY-
WELL, YOU SHOULD — IF A GIRL ALWAYS WAITS FOR A FELLA T' SHOW HIS ROYAL PLEASURE ABOUT CALLIN' HER UP, SHE'S INSULTIN' HERSELF —! AW— I BET YOU WERE KIDDIN' ABOUT NOT CALLIN' HIM—

COME ON NOW - LET ME HAVE THE HAT - I HAVE TO GO DOWN TOWN - YOU KNOW -
NO SIR - I'M NOT GOING TO LET YOU GO -
YOU DON'T WANT YOUR POOR UNCLE BIM TO GO BAREHEADED - AND CATCH HIS DEATH OF COLD - DO YOU?
WELL, THEN PROMISE ME THAT YOU'LL BE RIGHT BACK - AND GIVE ME A GREAT BIG KISS -
OH - WHAT A WHOPPER - WAS THERE EVER A SWEETER - MORE LOVABLE CHILD IN ALL THE WORLD - I'M NOT GOING TO WAIT A DAY LONGER - I'LL HAVE MY ATTORNEYS FILE ADOPTION PAPERS AT ONCE - I'LL MAKE SURE OF HAVING HER FOR ALWAYS -

DICK TRACY — Through the Hand

SH-HSH..! I JUST SAW SOMEBODY COME OUT OF THAT ALLEY! LOOK!
HE'S CARRYING A PACKAGE AND HE'S HEADED TOWARD THE PRESS ROOM!
SH-SH.. TAKE IT EASY, PAT! WE'LL CREEP AROUND BEHIND- WHAT'S THIS?
IT'S MILLIGAN! THEY MUST HAVE ALREADY GOT HIM OUT OF THE WAY!

Emma Goldman.

For years this kindly lady denounced our happy land; its methods all were shady, its statesmen should be canned. Its laws were all one-sided, and favored plutocrats, the people all were guided by men whose domes held bats. In language far from priestly she showed us our mistakes; here everything was beastly, and all our gods were fakes. Then stern officials nailed her, and led her to a ship; official voices hailed her, "Oh, Emma, take a trip; we're tired of your beshrewing, we're tired of all your curves; the musty rag you're chewing has got upon our nerves. So jog across the ocean and try some other shores, and we've a sort of notion you'll find they all are bores." Thus Emma was invited to chase herself one day, and from this land benighted she took her seemly way. And then she jogged and jaunted through foreign dale and glen, and all the time she wanted to get back here again. Her heart grew sad and clammy, homesickness made her sweat, and good old Uncle Sammy she thought the one best bet. And lately she was granted the joy of coming back to this fair land enchanted, to see the old home shack. And Emma wept with gladness to see old Uncle Sam, and wondered at the madness that got her in that jam.
